Roosevelt Warns Nation It Faces Terrible Peril

Summons Americans To Fight Eternally If Need Be to Hold Their Liberties

(The President's Text, Page 6.)

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday warned the Nation that it faces "terrible danger" and summoned Americans to "fight eternally," if need be, to hold their liberties.

In a seven-minute Armistice Day speech in Arlington Amphitheater, the President rebuked "cynics and doubters" who questioned the value of America's participation in the first World War. With obvious inference for 1941, he declared:

"If our armies of 1917 and 1918 had lost, there would not have been a man or woman in America who would have wondered why the war was fought. . . . We would have known why liberty is worth defending as those alone whose liberty is lost can know it."

Peril Greater Now, Welles Says

In the sober audience that faced the President were hundreds of uniformed men of the American Legion, the Army of 1941 and the American and British navies. Bombing planes, in war coats of olive drab, circled overhead.

Later in the day, in an address at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson in the Washington Cathedral, Undersecretary of State Welles asserted that "at any moment war may be forced upon us."

"The tides are running fast," Welles said. "The United States finds itself in far greater peril than it did in 1917," he warned, and said that the American people "have entered the valley of decision."

Same Danger Faces U. S.

In language more bitter than any responsible American official has yet directed at Hitler, Welles characterized the Nazi Fuehrer as a "criminal parasite."

"In raucous voice," speaking from the cellar of a Munich beer hall, Welles said, Hitler last week en-

1100 Volunteers Will Attend Chest Breakfast

Volunteer Community Chest workers have to get up before breakfast these days. An "early bird" breakfast will be held by 1300 volunteer leaders at 8 a. m. today at the Willard Hotel to "pep up" the group solicitation unit of the Chest appeal.

Representatives of nearly 1100 business offices, department stores, banks and other establishments will attend the breakfast. According to John Clifford Folger, general chairman of the campaign, the breakfast was resorted to because "the pressure of increased business activity has placed volunteer time at a premium."

"Because of its importance to human welfare in this community, we hope that the Chest appeal will be placed ahead of 'business as usual,'" he said.

Armistice Speeches Reflect Gravity

Armistice Day addresses, reflecting concern over the country's perilous international position, brought these declarations, among others, from high officials:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT—The people of America . . . believe that liberty is worth fighting for . . . and . . . they will fight eternally for it. Page 1.

UNDERSECRETARY WELLES—The waves of world conquest . . . are threatening, more nearly each day that passes, to engulf our own shores. Page 12.

New Tax Bill Will Follow Price Control

House Unit Likely To Take Some Time In Drafting Measure

The House Ways and Means Committee is expected to move immediately after House action on the price control bill to consider new anti-inflationary taxes recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and urged by the President.

Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, left Washington after pledging "cooperation" in the President's request, but ranking Democratic committee members predicted the committee will meet soon to consider the program.

Representative Robertson (Democrat, of Virginia), said 30 billion dollars in defense spending in the next calendar year will leave a "staggering deficit" unless Congress and the Administration move, both through new taxes and nondefense economies, to narrow the gap between income and outgo.

Expected to Take Time

But Robertson expressed doubt that a new tax program can be gotten under way in time for making the new levies effective in January, as provided by the President. He said his personal opinion was that the committee will go as thoroughly into its new hunt for taxes as it did into the last, and "not make any snap decisions."

"We will leave no stone unturned to let taxes fall equally, and that takes time," the Virginian said. "We need a proper price-control bill, another fair-tax bill, cuts in nondefense spending and a program that will deal properly with the defense labor problem, to look with greater confidence toward the future," Robertson said.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, responding to Congressional appeals, is expected to go before the House.

Quezon Receives Huge Majorities Even in Manila

Manila (Wednesday), Nov. 11. (P.) Returns from Manila and some provinces piled up tremendous majorities early today for the reelection of President Manuel Quezon and Vice President Sergio Osmena.

The City of Manila, previously considered an oppositionist stronghold, voted heavily in yesterday's election for Quezon and other candidates on the Nacionalista ticket. A tabulation at midnight gave: Quezon, 11,708; Juan Sumulong, Right Wing Popular Front candidate, 1873; Hilario Moncada, Moderate, was running a poor third.

All the Nacionalista Party's candidates for senator and representative in Manila appeared certain of victory with the exception of one candidate for representative in the commonwealth's Congress.

In Albay Province, where the Nacionalistas have no officially approved candidate for representative, Pio Duran, a one-time ardent pro-Japanese Filipino, was leading by an impressive margin in the race for representative from the Third District.

Bill the Sailor and Josephine Who Slept in Subways Will Wed

By the Associated Press
New York, Nov. 11.—The story about Josephine Phillips—the Pas-saic (N. J.) girl who slept in subways for a week—and about Bill, a sailor, was headed today for a happy ending.

She was anything but happy a month ago as she sat in the Woman's House of Detention and told her drab story of an unhappy home, work in a wool mill, a love affair with a man who turned out to be married and a suicide attempt. The only bright spots in her story were when she talked about Bill, Josephine, 18, thin and pale and with $10 in her purse, came to New York looking for work. Soon her money was gone and, broke and weary, she went to Central Park.

"It was just toward dusk," she said, "I'd been sitting there all day trying to warm up in the sun. When I looked up I saw a sailor standing in front of me. He said, 'Hello,' but I didn't answer. Then he sat down beside me and said, 'You look hungry, like a starved kitten I once found. I'll buy you a dinner.'"

And while she ate, Josephine told the sailor about herself. "I told him everything—and he understood," she said. The sailor wanted to give her money for a room. She wouldn't.

take it. He said he'd walk the streets with her the night through and that's what they did.

Finally they parted, agreeing to meet later at the same Central Park bench. The sailor didn't appear, but another one did with a note. A ship had sailed and Bill was.

'Hand-Picked' Jury Convicted Him, Langer Tells Senators

By Robert De Vere
Post Staff Writer

A "hand-picked" jury convicted him of criminal conspiracy after Interior Secretary Langer ordered investigation of his administration as Governor of North Dakota. William Langer charged yesterday in his battle to retain his membership in the United States Senate.

In effect, he declared before the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee that his conviction in 1934 of conspiring to collect a percentage of the earnings of Federal relief workers and clients was the result of a plot by the United States Government.

"I want to charge that the jury was absolutely hand-picked," he said. "Let there be no question about that in the mind of any Senator."

Of the 72 names on the trial jury list, he declared, there was not one who was a "friend of mine." On the contrary, he quoted the prosecuting attorney as admitting to him that all but six names on the list were those of sworn political enemies.

"It just couldn't happen that there would be so many of them (his enemies) there in that jury box," Langer added.

Langer said "I took it upon myself to investigate me as Governor of the State and that he 'could never understand it.' Nine investigators came to the State capital at Bismarck, he declared, to probe the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in North Dakota.

Arkansas Traveler

D. C. Lawyer, Tired of Fiddling With Car, Sends It Into Creek

By the Associated Press

Conway, Ark., Nov. 11.—Motorists on the Cadron Highway were naturally surprised today when a man alighted from his automobile, threw it into gear with motor running and stood by while it plunged into a flooded creek.

In Conway, where the driver was brought by a passerby, he identified himself to police as a Washington (D. C.) attorney. A police check with Washington brought information that the attorney was on a pleasure trip through the Southwest.

Officers had the car pulled from the creek. They found it contained luggage packed with extra suits, a new typewriter, radio, various lawbooks and an expensive set of golf clubs.

The owner, standing on his constitutional rights to abandon these belongings, left Conway by bus. Police said he told them: "I was tired of fiddling with it, and tired of all that stuff in the car. It was my property and I had a right to get rid of it."

Later, at Little Rock, Ark., the "Arkansas Traveler" was identified as C. B. Seal, 1560 Hemlock Street Northwest, Washington.

At that address a sister, Mrs. George S. Wilson, said he resigned his job as an attorney with the Department of Justice two weeks ago, packed all his belongings in his 1935 automobile and left without telling her where he was going. She believed that he had packed up merely to move in with a friend, but learned several days later that he had traveled to Indianapolis to see ATTORNEY, Page 4, Column 2.

22-Ounce Girl, Five Days Old, Puts Up Real Fight for Life

Still unseen by her mother, Bette Gay Bonbrast entered her sixth day of life this morning—all 22 ounces of her.

So tiny that she could fit into a shoebox but already the possessor of a healthy appetite, the infant fought for survival yesterday with all the tenacity that was her father's when he carried the ball for McKinley Tech a decade ago.

"We're keeping our fingers ever so tightly crossed," said Mrs. and Mrs. Leroy D. Bonbrast, cheerfully tolerating an interruption in the midst of their selection of a name for the tiny newborn arrival.

After seven days, the baby will have a better than fair chance," continued Mrs. Bonbrast, an attractive woman of 30 years, who is getting just a little impatient for at least a peek at Bette Gay. "At least, that's what the doctor said."

Born Friday morning at three minutes past midnight, the infant was believed by the attending obstetrician and nurses to have no chance to live because of its fantastically small size—11 inches long and 28 1/2 ounces in weight.

Mrs. Bonbrast actually was told that her baby had not survived and she did not know until Saturday afternoon—more than 36 hours later.

Crisis Creates Trend to Free Shipping Bill

Decisive Vote Sought To Strengthen America's Hand for Showdown

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Increasing gravity of America's two-ocean defense threat last night was reported to be influencing the House majority for the President's bill to arm merchantmen and lift war zone restrictions.

"Some Administration spokesmen frankly called for a 'decisive vote' to strengthen this Government's hand in any Far Eastern showdown with Japan as well as in the Battle of the Atlantic."

As the House prepared to open two days of debate on Senate-approved authority for armed merchant ships to journey through combat zones, supporting gains were reported from Pacific Coast members, sensitive to the Japanese menace.

Prospects for a strong vote would catapult should the President ask affirmative legislation to curb defense labor troubles, it was privately conceded in several quarters.

Rayburn Confident

Several Senators opposed Neutrality Act revision because of the Administration's failure to end defense strikes, and many echo this position in the House.

Mass resignation of C. I. O. members and alternates from the National Mediation Board brought the possibility of prompt action by the President to cope with defense labor discord that would strengthen his hand in the House.

House majority whips, under Representative Boland (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, were still polling Democratic members to apprise leaders in advance of the probable Neutrality Act revision count. Speaker Rayburn expressed confidence in the expected result.

Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, ranking majority member of the House Foreign Relations Committee, said he will plainly tell the House today that it is of paramount importance at this time that this Government's foreign course receive the full backing of Congress.

Danger Increases

"Our danger has greatly increased since the House passed the armed ship bill," Representative Johnson said. "Today our national safety is imperiled not only in the Atlantic but in the Pacific. It is tremendously important, particularly in its effect abroad, that the House give a good supporting vote to this bill."

Leaders have refrained from any snap prophecies pending completion of their poll, but Speaker Rayburn told reporters that it "looked all right" for the bill.

Should the official vote canvass not show a good majority for the bill, there were indications that strategy might be revised to send the bill to conference instead. The Administration, it was said in one quarter, would not be satisfied with an extremely narrow victory such as the hairbreadth one-vote margin for Draft Act extension.

While there was no hope for repetition of the thumping 121 majority which the House gave the armed ship bill, leaders appeared

Finns Turn Down Hull's Peace Offer

War Must Go On To Guard Against Peril of Future, Note Declares

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Wednesday), Nov. 12.—The Finnish government today rejected the United States' warning to stop fighting Russia or risk loss of American friendship.

In a polite note to Washington, disclosed here, the Helsinki regime asserted Finland did not want to continue the fight any longer than her vital security demanded, but could not agree to expose herself to future peril by interrupting military operations before her objective was wholly realized.

Cites Defensive Action

The Finnish reply said the defensive nature of the Finnish struggle was not altered by Finnish efforts to "make harmless and to man the enemy's attack bases beyond the 1939 borders."

Since going to war against Russia last June 26, Finland has gained back substantially all the territory she was forced to concede to Russia after the winter war of 1939-40, with the exception of the Hanko Peninsula and some islands.

If Finland had possessed enough strength, she would have crossed the borders to get at these bases in the winter war, the Finnish note said, and "surely nobody would have doubted the justice of the Finnish operations."

This message was in response to the warning Secretary Hull disclosed in Washington on November 3.

Despite the Finnish rejection of the United States' request and warning, the Finnish radio on November 6 was heard to broadcast the statement that "military operations are drawing to a close so far as our country is concerned."

Army May Dig In

"Even though war goes on between great states," the announcement continued, "Finland will not carry on any longer than is necessary for her own safety and defense, while it is realized that our frontiers cannot finally be determined until the coming peace conference."

[The Post was told by informed circles at that time that the announcement meant the Finnish army would dig in when its objectives were reached and there face the Russian forces. It was said that Finland was not yet ready to discuss peace with Russia.]

Delivered to Envoy

[The United States Government took the attitude that since Finland already had reconquered substantially all the territory lost to Russia in the winter war of 1939-40, further military activity by her on the side of Germany would constitute aggression and interfere with this country's policy of aid to all those fighting the Nazis.]

[Officials here would not discuss the Finnish reply last night, pending FINN, Page 3, Column 1.]

Brazil Pledges War Aid to All In the Americas

By the Associated Press

Porto Alegre, Brazil, Nov. 11.—Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha was quoted today by the newspaper Folha da Tarde as saying that Brazil would not remain neutral if an American nation became involved in the war.

"We are and wish to be pan-Americanists," he said, according to the newspaper. "We follow the American way, we go along with America's fortunes. We will not be neutral if there is any participation by one American nation in the war."

"We ardently hope, however, that peace will return to the world and that war will not knock at our doors. Our position in this respect was defined by the President of the republic in masterly form in a speech yesterday."

President Getulio Vargas, speaking on the fourth anniversary of his "new state," pledged Brazil's full cooperation in the common defense of the Americas.

Doubtful Future

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Climaxing a bitterly resentful denunciation of the Mediation Board's refusal to favor John L. Lewis' demand for a union shop in the "captive" coal mines, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the mine workers' union secretary-treasurer, Thomas Kennedy, last night announced their resignations as the two regular C. I. O. members of the defense mediating agency.

At a tense and dramatic press conference, Murray added that he had been advised that five of the other seven C. I. O. alternate members of the board were following his lead and would soon resign.

Declaring that the decision handed down Monday "makes it impossible for labor to retain any confidence" in the board's future actions, Murray said that the body had "outlived its usefulness" and was "through." Although he admitted that it was up to each C. I. O. member to decide individually whether he would accept membership on the board, the C. I. O. president said, "I can see no good reason, no moral reason, for the C. I. O. members to participate on a board of this character."

Death Blow to Board

Privately, other Mediation Board members admitted that without the cooperation of the C. I. O. it would be impossible for the board to continue its functions.

Murray, his Scottish burr growing stronger with every angry thump of his fist, declined to tell reporters whether the United Mine Workers would answer the board's rejection of their aims with a strike, following a Saturday deadline set by Lewis.

He announced, however, that the union's full national policy committee, 200 strong, would meet here Friday to make a decision.

A strike would virtually paralyze the mining of coal used by the Nation's steel mills.

Letter to President

It was not immediately clear last night whether the C. I. O. would boycott the Mediation Board entirely in refusing to meet with it on any disputes in which member unions were involved. Murray appeared to leave open a small crack in the door by a statement in his and Kennedy's minority opinion on the coal dispute declaring that the C. I. O. was "still of the opinion" that a policy of using all available mediation machinery to settle labor controversies is desirable.

Asked point-blank whether C. I. O. unions would refuse to submit to Mediation Board procedure, Murray said that this was a matter of policy and of necessity had to be discussed by the C. I. O.'s international executive board, which is

Murray Condemns Board Decision

Starting from a lone point of agreement—that only 1 in every 200 of the Nation's coal miners is not a member of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers—the nine-man majority and the two-man minority of the National Defense Mediation Board yesterday issued sharply divergent opinions on the justification of the $3,000 "captive" mine workers' demand for a union shop.

The opinions were released at a press conference of Board Chairman William H. Davis, who had announced the recommendation and the vote the day before, but not the arguments pro and con. After Davis discussed the majority report and commented on the minority finding, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and one of the two dissenting board members, argued in rebuttal in a press conference at the miners' headquarters.

The theme which ran through the majority decision was that the national emergency should not be used "either to tear down or to artificially stimulate the normal growth of unionism in defense industries."

Mines Declared Protected

Convinced that the great mine-workers' union, oldest and strongest in the C. I. O., was protected from any future weakening or disruption by reason of the Wagner Act and its own strength, the majority made its basic argument on the thesis that the union's own interests would be best served by achieving its 100 per cent organization goal by voluntary agreement through negotiations.

Thus, the opinion continued, "the U. M. W. themselves will be very much more able to resist the stresses of any period of depression or any attack that may occur in the future than if the efforts of the U. M. W. were now buttressed by the aid of a Government agency or if the goal were achieved by interrupting defense production."

If in the interests of national defense the union consents to suspend for the duration of the emergency "their unquestionable right to match their economic strength against that of the operators of these mines," the report continued, the decision would "greatly strengthen the union's position before the people of the country and that they would thus 'erect the most effective protection against destructive forces of reaction that could be thought of.'"

Their position would thus be "unassailable," Davis added.

Murray angrily dismissed this line of thought, declaring that the union itself could be the only judge of what was in its own interest. His position, jointly made with the other C. I. O. member of the board, Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the U. M. W., was that there could be no clearer case in the country for the duration of the union shop, inasmuch as "it is hard to think of a reason why the individual should persist in refusing to join."

As for the steel companies, the opinion continued, it would seem to be the part of wisdom for the operators involved in this dispute to accept the offer of the U. M. W. with its added assurance of full and uninterrupted production at the mines throughout the period of the conflict.

The operators "remained unimpressed" by this argument, Davis ruefully admitted.

San Diego Navy Projects Strike Settled

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 11.—Settlement of a strike of 2164 A. F. of L. building tradesmen on 25 miles of building projects was announced today by union leaders.

K. G. Bitter, building trades council secretary, said the craftsmen would return to their jobs at noon tomorrow.

Bitter, in calling the strike, said it was directed at contractors awarded construction jobs on Navy and Marine expansion programs, but Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakey, Eleventh Naval District commandant, asserted in a statement that labor leaders were "defying only one contractor—the United States Government."

John Murray, Los Angeles, general representative of the carpenters, said the settlement proposal was based on a new interpretation of the Navy on jump sum Government projects which would permit contractors to pay the scale demanded by the unions.

On cost-plus contracts, Murray said, wage differences will be submerged in an OPM board of review for decision.

"We have been assured," Murray said, "that the Navy Department will not interfere with collective bargaining."

"The majority of the work now being paid the wage scales being asked generally—either being paid now or will be within the next few weeks as old work finishes."

Conferences Held

Seven crafts struck, demanding 12½ cents more per hour. These were the carpenters, laborers, cement finishers, electricians, tile setters, iron workers and plumbers. Twelve other crafts were affected, however, since their men would not pass picket lines.

The return-to-work decision was made after a series of conferences conducted by Harry Malcom, Federal mediator, with Navy officers and union representatives, and as the Navy completed arrangements to recruit employees through civil service appointments.

The strike began last Thursday to enforce a demand for $1 a day wage boost.

Admiral Blakey had termed the strike an "open revolt against the United States Government." This brought a reply from Bitter that "if any of our men were in revolt against the Government we would be the first to expel them."

Construction had been halted by the strike at projects at the naval air station, the naval training station, the Marine base, a Navy auxiliary field, a Marine rifle range, the Marines' Camp Elliott, a Navy radio station at Point Loma, four-million-dollar graving dock and the destroyer base and Navy supply depot.

The settlement also will permit resumption of work on the Federal Works Agency's $1,675,000 demobilization housing project, the first struck, November 3, in the union's demand for wage boosts.

Threat of Second Welders' Strike Fades

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP)—Threat of a second welders' walkout in Los Angeles County shipyards disappeared tonight with a statement from Karl V. Morris, president of the Independent United Welders, Cutlers and Helpers Union.

Morris' announcement, at a mass meeting called to consider further action, elicited a vote of confidence in his course at a Washington conference last week with OPM officials which resulted in termination of a ten-day walkout for recognition as an autonomous union.

Morris told the meeting of about 1000 union members that the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. officials had pledged they would work with the welders to carry out the OPM-sponsored proposal for suspension of the strike pending mediation conferences to start in Washington next Monday.

A union announcement said remaining strikers who have not yet returned to work, numbering about 450, would be back on their jobs tomorrow morning.

U. S. Promised Steel Needed To Beat Hitler

this test of their resources," the President wrote, "and I am equally as positive that labor will work with the executives for that purpose is mutual—the protection of the lives and the homes of the American people and of every free home on earth."

"No greater burden has ever been thrown on a single industry," the President's letter conceded.

Commenting upon the message, Knudsen said the defense program has expanded so rapidly that it is surprising that the steel industry has been able to keep pace as well as it has. Something over $1,500,000,000 a month, he said, is now being expended in the defense program. Early next year the rate will be stepped up to more than two billion dollars monthly, up to 1,000, and defense officials now are talking of a rate of 2,000 a month.

Armor plate requirements have risen so rapidly, he said, that it has been impossible to keep up with requirements. In tanks alone, the original call for 400,000 a month has been stepped up to 1,000, and defense officials now are talking of a rate of 2,000 a month.

"Neither government nor industry has anything to be ashamed of in the progress shown in defense to date," he concluded.

Responding, E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., said the industry is ready to do its part and urged government to "tell us what you need and when you need it," and the steel will be delivered.

"It steel is what's necessary to win this fight," he continued, "we ought to be able to do it. The nations fighting Hitler have a total steel capacity of 130 millions tons a year, and we have 50 million tons available among the Axis powers and the countries they have conquered. This country alone can produce 88 million tons a year."

Turning to face the array of Government officials behind him on the rostrum, Grace explained that the steel industry is highly integrated and delays in any one division affect the industry's ability to produce on schedule.

"Mr. Hillman," he said, speaking directly to Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General of OPM in charge of defense labor problems, "labor troubles in any one division will slow down production."

Later in the day, C. Allen, assistant chief of the iron and steel branch raw materials division, OPM, declared that 1942 steel production will be four million tons below the desired capacity of 87 million tons because of a shortage of 6,400,000 tons of scrap and pig iron.

Leg Is Forecast

In 1943, he said, steel mill capacity will reach 90 million actual output tons, but will lag seven million tons behind that figure because, by that year, the scrap and pig iron demand will amount to $900,000,000.

Hillman, who discussed the labor end of the defense program, made no reference to the "captive mine" issue in the steel industry. He praised labor for its cooperation and said that in many instances valuable hours of work are being lost because of a lack of materials for plants.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, asked the steel industry to give active support to the price bill due to be voted upon by Congress this week.

Spokesmen for the Maritime Commission, Army, Navy and War Relocation Authority, all present, complimented the steel makers of lags in steel deliveries.

fore the Byrd joint committee investigating nondefense spending tomorrow to recommend a billion-dollar slash in nonessential costs.

Morgenstern's tax suggestions, laid before the Ways and Means Committee last week, called for about $4,800,000,000 in new anti-inflationary taxes, with emphasis on a new withdrawal tax similar to social security payroll taxes, which would range upward to 15 per cent.

The committee voted "temporarily to defer" action. President Roosevelt promptly wrote Doughton that additional taxes, effective within the next two or three months, are urgently needed to absorb excess purchasing power, ward off inflation, and to pay in cash for the greater part of defense production.

Before leaving, Doughton advised the President that himself and Chairman George, of the Senate Finance Committee, would be glad to confer with the President and Secretary Morgenthau on additional taxes at their convenience.

Welders' Strike Fades

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP)—Threat of a second welders' walkout in Los Angeles County shipyards disappeared tonight with a statement from Karl V. Morris, president of the Independent United Welders, Cutlers and Helpers Union.

Morris' announcement, at a mass meeting called to consider further action, elicited a vote of confidence in his course at a Washington conference last week with OPM officials which resulted in termination of a ten-day walkout for recognition as an autonomous union.

Morris told the meeting of about 1000 union members that the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. officials had pledged they would work with the welders to carry out the OPM-sponsored proposal for suspension of the strike pending mediation conferences to start in Washington next Monday.

meeting Sunday in Detroit at the beginning of the annual C. I. O. convention.

Murray and Kennedy's resignations were submitted in a letter to President Roosevelt which asserted the "perfectly meritorious case" of the miners in the captive mine dispute, where a union shop was sought for 53,000 workers, 95 per cent of whom are already members of the U. M. W.

Murray and Kennedy added: "The uncompromising attitude of the majority opinion is in itself a negation of the basic principles upon which the board was established by you in the effort to promote mediation in lieu of industrial conflict. This opinion discloses that, regardless of the merits of any case, labor unions shall be denied the right of normal growth and legitimate aspiration, such as union shop, and the traditional open-shop policy of the antilabor employers shall prevail."

"For these reasons we do not feel that in good conscience we can continue as members of this board," Hilted Previously

The two C. I. O. board members had intimated their resignation decision in their minority opinion, which was released at a press conference of William H. Davis, Mediation Board chairman, an hour before Murray's conference.

Asked about Murray's assertion that labor could no longer retain confidence in the board, Davis replied "honestly expressing his feelings at the moment."

"I hope," Davis continued, "that on sober second thought he'll change his opinion."

Informed of this remark, Murray snapped, "I am not aware that I was drunk when I said it."

Davis declined comment last night as to the future of his board when he was told of Murray's resignation and the impending departure of most of the other C. I. O. members.

With respect to Murray, however, he said: "When this storm has blown over I hope I may resume with Mr. Murray, for whom I have the highest regard and deepest affection, the same relationship that we had in the past."

Others About to Resign

Besides Murray and Kennedy, the other alternate C. I. O. appointees to the board who, Murray said, were about to resign, were Hugh Lyons, New England C. I. O. representative; John Brophy, director of C. I. O. Industries; Union Council; James Carey, secretary of the C. I. O.; Clinton Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; and S. H. Daley, president of the United Rubber Workers.

Murray explained that he had not yet been in touch with and therefore did not know the attitude of the remaining two C. I. O. alternates, Emil Rieve, president of the United Textile Workers, and Herbert W. Payne, vice president of the same union.

Despite Davis' remarks and Murray's profession of faith in the mediation process, there seemed little possibility last night either for the avoidance of a coal strike or continuation of C. I. O. participation in the Mediation Board.

In their minority opinion, Murray and Kennedy charged that the board had not discharged its obligations, and to consider "the merits of the dispute."

Labor "Denied Rights"

"To the contrary," they added, "the National Defense Mediation Board has now decided that henceforth, regardless of the merits of any case, labor unions must be denied the rights of normal growth and legitimate aspirations, such as the union shop, and the traditional open-shop policy of the antilabor employers must prevail."

Murmansk, Archangel Being Cut Off, Nazis Say; Germans Stopped Dead at Moscow, Reds Claim

Leningrad Losing Military Significance, Invaders Declare

By the Associated Press
 Berlin, Nov. 11.—The German armies of the north appeared tonight to be pursuing a steadily developing strategy aimed at cutting off Russia's access to the Arctic Ocean.
 Military sources said the Soviet Union's Arctic seaports were being isolated to an increasing degree. (The main ones are Murmansk, on the Kola Peninsula, and Archangel, on the southern shores of the White Sea. Most ships carrying British and American supplies to Russia have been reported using Archangel.)
 The Arctic is more difficult to block than the other water inlets to the great Soviet land empire because of the distances from the zones of active warfare.

Advances Reported

However, German military spokesmen tonight said German and Finnish advances east of Leningrad and operations in the region of Lake Ladoga and Karelia were cutting off the Arctic from the Russian armies, even though the main attacking forces were hundreds of miles from northern shores.
 With the Germans now at Tikhvin, 110 miles southeast of Leningrad, and the Finns and Germans making progress in the Ladoga area, these spokesmen said it was extremely difficult to bring American and British materiel from the northern ports down to Moscow and the Caucasus.

It was conceded that war materiel brought to Murmansk or White Sea ports still could be delivered to Leningrad over Lake Ladoga, but the German commentators insisted that Leningrad, "walled off from the rest of Russia by German weapons," is losing military significance.

Overrun Pillboxes

The high command claimed that in northern Karelia, Finns and Germans had destroyed large parts of a Soviet division after overrunning 700 camouflaged in a sector not specifically located. It was announced that 1200 prisoners were taken and several times that number killed or wounded.

The German radio said that SS (elite) shock troops penetrated the Leningrad defense ring, occupying 14 pillboxes and then dynamiting them as they retired.

On the central (Moscow) front the radio said a German panzer battalion "inflicted considerable losses" in an attack behind a tank spearhead.
 The Crimea, however, remained the scene of the hardest fighting. German sources reported that the Russians were trying to evacuate troops from the naval base of Sevastopol by sea and said the German air force was disrupting this.

Finns Reject Hull Peace Offer

ing receipt and study of the full text—Editor's note.

The Government, after a long meeting at which the final details of the answer were approved, announced the document had been delivered last night to the United States Minister, Arthur Schoenfeld. Former Foreign Minister Elias Erkko's newspaper, Iltis Sanomat, took issue last night with the statement by Hull questioning whether the Finnish government could any longer be considered a free agent of the Finnish people if it continues its present policy.

"It proves how wrong ideas about our position have spread even into the United States official quarters, which ought to have means to determine the real facts," the newspaper said.

It reiterated that Finland's army is waging war purely for Finnish objectives, and that the Finnish government is absolutely free of Germany or the Nazi system.

"The real facts," it added, "should help prevent misunderstandings with America, as everybody in this country sincerely hopes."

On November 3, Secretary Hull reminded the Finnish government of information previously given to the Finnish Minister in Washington regarding the possibility of bringing about a peaceful settlement of Russo-Finnish difficulties.

Hull explained that on August 18 the Finnish Minister in Washington Hjalmar Procopé, was informed the State Department had learned the Soviet Union was prepared to discuss a Finnish-Soviet peace on the basis of territorial compensation to Finland.

Up until early November, Hull said, the Finns had shown no desire to investigate this possibility. Last week Helsinki denied any knowledge of such Soviet proposals and the State Department then made public documents to show that they had been made known to the Finns.

The President's Day

By International News Service

NO ARMISTICE: Like many another defense chief, the President couldn't observe Armistice Day by knocking off work yesterday. With a skeleton staff, Mr. Roosevelt worked steadily from breakfast time until 10:40 when he left for Arlington and the Nation's memorial to World War I's Unknown Soldier.

IN MEMORIAM: Through streets cleared of traffic by police, heavily guarded by Secret Service men, whizzed the big, black White House car. In the back with the President sat Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Military Aides Maj. Gen. Edwin Watson and Capt. John Beardsall. In front rode personal bodyguard Tommy Quarters. In the motorcade following the President were Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine Commandant; Chief of Army Staff Gen. George Marshall and other lords of democracy's defense.

BACK TO WORK: Shortly after his address the President left the chill and windswept national cemetery, headed back to the White House, his office and more work.

CONFERENCE: As soon as he reached his desk, the President's buzzer gave the go signal to his secretariat, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the warring United Mine Workers, came in. As Kennedy excited, Budgeter Harold Smith and his financial woes stepped up for an airing.

MERGER: Next was Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administration captain, to talk over the possibility of putting NYA and CCC together, and getting an equally efficient but less expensive break for America's youth.

END OF A BUSY HOLIDAY: Clearing the decks for action, the President put the lid on further appointments, settled down to a deskful of problems and counterproblems. Two shorts on the White House buzzer brought lunch to his desk, one long one brought a couple of secretaries, and Mr. Roosevelt pitched in, finished off the tag-ends of the paper work over lunch. The afternoon wore on, and even the conscientious Government officials drifted homewards, but the President stayed on at his desk, using the phone frequently, frowning over official reports from abroad. The evening was left guestless, in case more snarls appeared to be untangled before morning.

Details of Damage
 It also gave details of damage done in German equipment by Russian air action. Russian planes, it said, wiped out an infantry battalion and a cavalry platoon, and on the Western and Southern Fronts smashed 16 German tanks, 60 loaded motor vehicles, 55 ammunition transports and 25 motorcycles.

Everywhere along the Central Front the Germans were reported by the Soviet command to be showing signs of increasing exhaustion.

The Russians claimed the destruction by Red bombers alone, of 406 Nazi tanks in the Maloyaroslavl sector.

Wearing Out Invaders

Official Soviet claims that the long and bitter struggle on a relatively static Moscow front was wearing out the invaders were stressed in a communique which reported:

"A large group of prisoners captured in the last few days on the Western Front gave evidence during questioning of further morale and physical deterioration. All prisoners looked exhausted." While little was said officially during the day of either the Leningrad or far Southern fronts of the Crimea and Donets Basin areas, a Moscow broadcast claimed that three German generals had been killed in the Leningrad area, one of them by guerrillas operating behind the advanced Nazi lines.

Of the Crimea, where the Russians were trying at all cost to hold the ports of Sevastopol and Kach, the midday Russian communique said nothing specifically beyond reporting the destruction in local action of 70 German tanks and 200 trucks carrying infantry and munitions and the dispersal of two German infantry battalions.

Position of Armies 'Considerably Better,' Russians Assert

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, Nov. 11.—The position of the Red armies before Moscow is "considerably better," with the German advance checked and Russian counterattacks inflicting heavy losses upon the invaders, a Soviet spokesman asserted tonight.

The Germans have been stopped dead still on every front around Moscow, said S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, at a press conference immediately after a telephone conversation with Moscow.

On the southern front Lozovsky said the German advance toward Rostov-on-Don also was halted. He asserted the Germans were making sensational claims of gains in the Crimea "to cover up the situation near Moscow."

Nazi emphasis on the weather on the central front "shows they are meeting enormous difficulties," he said.

"With our well-equipped army determined to die rather than retreat, the weather can do nothing," said Lozovsky. "The weather helps, but the basic factor is the army."

Nazis Hurl Back Surrounded, Reds Say

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 11.—The Russian armies defending Moscow have thrown the Germans back on the southwestern anchor of the Red line near Maloyaroslavl and have surrounded substantial forces of the invader on the northwestern wing near Volokolamsk, it was reported here tonight.

Each sector is some 85 miles from Moscow, the one below and the other above the capital.

In the third major area of heavy fighting—around Tula, 100 miles due south of Moscow—action by the available accounts was bloodily inconclusive.

Tonight's Russian communique said that in the last four days of fighting on the Tula front Russian units had annihilated more than 1000 Germans, capturing 7 field guns, 19 mortars, 300 cases of mines, 38 machine guns, more than 200 rifles, over 100 horses, two wireless transmitters and much other equipment.

War Sidelines Gen. Wavell Takes Blame For Libya

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, Nov. 10 (Delayed). (AP)—Taking full responsibility for the British setback in Libya last spring, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in India, said today the Germans had counterattacked in Libya at least a month earlier than he had expected.

Gen. Wavell said that practically all trained and equipped troops in the Middle East were ordered to Greece upon the appeal of the Greek government.

"Our conquests in Cirenaica were left to be held by a garrison of partly trained and partly equipped troops. I made a miscalculation there."

"I didn't expect the enemy to counterattack until the end of April at the earliest—by which time I hoped to have back at least part of a seasoned Indian division from Italian East Africa and to have completed the equipment of troops left in Cirenaica, which consisted of a British armored brigade, an Australian division and an Indian motor brigade. All of these were short of equipment, transport and training."

The hostages were arrested quickly, the order for their seizure marking the first time Italy has adopted that form of reprisal, heretofore used by the Germans in France and elsewhere. The arrests were made, it was stated, in another part of the Balkan area. What the ultimate fate of the hostages will be was not made clear, but they at least will be held, it was indicated, until the persons responsible for the attacks are arrested and tried.

Nazis Use Horse Carts

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—Bad weather and poor roads "are gradually forcing the Germans to abandon the use of motor cars and armored vehicles and move their troops and war materials in horse carts," the Moscow radio declared tonight.

In one district, Red Star said, "Soviet air scouts discovered a Fascist column of about 700 carts. This column was halted by our machine-gun fire from the air. The Fascists lost half their horses and many carts were destroyed."

No English Yule Cards

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Nov. 12 (AP)—Christmas cards fell victim to the war today when the ministry of supply announced they were banned as part of drastic new restrictions on the use of paper "required for munitions and other essential purposes."

New regulations call for sharp reductions in the output of calendars, programs and directories. Posters advertising motion pictures were ordered cut in half and limited to ten.

Petain to Get English Funds

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—Sir H. Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, revealed in the House of Commons today that Britain was permitting Marshal Petain, French chief of state, to draw a £800 annuity (about $2400) from a Canadian company.

Wood said the annuity was taken out in 1927 and that the government had considered stopping it but thought the matter was petty.

Wood said an "exception" was made in the case of Petain because he was the head of a state which "still maintained diplomatic relations with the Dominion of Canada."

Wood said that in view of the Petain matter, he was considering allowing parents to send money to children who have been evacuated to the United States. Up to now, they have not been permitted to do so.

Canada Postpones Price Control

Ottawa, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Canadian government tonight announced the postponement from November 17 to December 1 of the effective date for its price control regulations.

Italians Hold Serbs Hostage In Slaying

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 11.—The Italian military held 150 hostages tonight in the Dalmatian section of old Yugoslavia on orders of Premier Mussolini while troops searched for the men who threw three bombs at an Italian army band and fired a machine gun at a truckload of troops.

One soldier was killed, more than two dozen wounded and 25 civilians were hurt in the guerrilla attacks, which were the most serious since the Italian annexation of Dalmatia.

The attacks occurred at Spalato late yesterday while the band was on its way to play at the lowering of the colors at nightfall, which the Italians make into an impressive ceremony whenever their troops are garrisoned.

Military bandmen of an Alpine division were the victims of the bomb throwing. A truck loaded with soldiers going on leave was fired upon by hidden machine guns at almost the same time.

The hostages were arrested quickly, the order for their seizure marking the first time Italy has adopted that form of reprisal, heretofore used by the Germans in France and elsewhere. The arrests were made, it was stated, in another part of the Balkan area. What the ultimate fate of the hostages will be was not made clear, but they at least will be held, it was indicated, until the persons responsible for the attacks are arrested and tried.

954 Die in Strife Among Serbs

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Belgrade newspaper Novo Vreme said today that 954 persons had been killed in battles with German-directed Serbian regular troops in battles from July through October. The paper said 174 had been wounded and 547 captured. All were termed Communists.

Jailed for Passing Anti-Nazi Pamphlets

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 11.—Four Norwegians and three Danes have been sentenced to prison by special courts for distributing anti-German propaganda in the two countries.

The Norwegians, including a father and his son, are charged with having spread in their villages circulars containing the text of a London news broadcast. The Danes were sentenced for distributing propaganda of the now-forbidden Danish Communist Party.

2 Dead, 5 Wounded in Killer's Mad Ride Through London

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 11.—A motorist with a shotgun raced through three London suburbs for three hours on this war-time Armistice Day, shooting into streets, doorways and gardens and killing two persons and wounding five others before the police caught him.

All but one of his victims were women.

Afternoon newspapers pushed the war news aside to make way for a running account of the spread of terror in the quiet suburban roads of Acton, Chiswick and Ealing.

One of the wounded women staggered into a cafe crying:

"The Germans have shot me!"

Among the victims was a crippled lawyer named Leslie Ernest Ludford, shot down while he was buying an Armistice Day poppy. Ludford, who died in a hospital, managed to whisper his assailant's name but did not divulge it, pending a formal charge.

The 6-foot gunman first wounded a neighbor woman in the foot, then walked across the street toward the retreating Ludford and fired at him point-blank.

As the lawyer slumped to the sidewalk, his assailant raced away in a hired sedan. An alarm was sounded, and London squad cars and bobbies on bicycles spread through surrounding areas on the lookout for him.

Five minutes after Ludford was shot, the man halted outside the Chiswick home of two elderly women, rang their doorbell and returned to his car and waited. When the two women came to the door he shot them both.

One woman at whom he fired saved herself by holding a pile of blankets against her body. The shot blew a large hole in the blankets but did not harm her.

Murray Condemns Board Decision

Starting from a lone point of agreement—that only 1 in every 200 of the Nation's coal miners is not a member of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers—the nine-man majority and the two-man minority of the National Defense Mediation Board yesterday issued sharply divergent opinions on the justification of the $5,000 "captive" mine workers' demand for a union shop.

The opinions were released at a press conference of Board Chairman William H. Davis, who had announced the recommendation of the vote the day before, but not the arguments pro and con. After Davis discussed the majority report and commented on the minority findings, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and one of the two dissenting board members, argued in rebuttal in a press conference at the miners' headquarters.

The theme which ran through the majority decision was that the national emergency should not be used "either to tear down or to artificially stimulate the normal growth of unionism in defense industries."

Mines Declared Protected

Convinced that the great mine-workers' union, oldest and strongest in the C. I. O., was protected from any future weakening or disruption by reason of the Wagner Act and its own strength, the majority made its basic argument on the thesis that the union's own interests would be best served by achieving its 100 per cent organization goal by voluntary agreement through negotiations.

Thus the opinion continued, "the U. M. W. themselves will be very much more able to resist the stresses of any period of depression or any attack that may occur in the future than if the efforts of the U. M. W. were now buttressed by the aid of a Government agency, or if the goal were achieved by interrupting defense production."

If in the interests of national defense the union consents to suspend for the duration of the emergency "their unquestioned right to match their economic strength against that of the operators of these mines," the report continued, the decision would "greatly strengthen" the union's position before the people of the country and that they would thus "erect the most effective protection against destructive forces of reaction that could be thought of."

Their position would thus be "unassailable," Davis added.

Murray angrily dismissed this line of thought, declaring that the union itself could be the only judge of what was in its own interest.

His position, jointly made with the other C. I. O. member of the board, Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the U. M. W., was that there could be no clearer case in the country for the award of the union shop, inasmuch as 95 per cent of the miners in the captive mines were members of the union, and that the union shop applied throughout the rest of the coal industry, notably among 300,000 miners in commercial mines, and even in the captive mines of at least two steel companies.

This being so, the minority opinion declared, the board should be bound by the precedent it set on June 18, when it recommended that a Bethlehem Steel Co. shipbuilding subsidiary on the Pacific Coast sign a master agreement covering shipbuilding labor on the West Coast, which agreement included the closed shop.

"On the merits, there is no basis for distinguishing the captive coal case from the Bethlehem Steel Co. case," Murray and Kennedy said.

Challenged by Davis

This Davis hotly denied. "There couldn't be a case more different," he told reporters. The Bethlehem case, he expanded, was a wholly artificial situation created by the Government itself because of its emergency demands for more ships and for an enormous expansion of operations. To stabilize labor relations he explained, the Government sponsored negotiations for a master agreement, and of its own initiative brought unions and builders together. In negotiations, the unions and 38 of the 39 companies involved "voluntarily" agreed to a closed shop.

"In Bethlehem we felt the Government was justified in seeing the thing through," Davis said. Davis also explained that the monopoly element distinguished the two cases. A machinist, he explained, could still find work in other industries if he were unwilling to join the union as demanded under the shipbuilding closed shop arrangement. A coal miner with similar objectives, however, would be at a loss for a livelihood, he said.

Murray Cites 'Rightful Claim'

Murray, however, told reporters that for the first time in his knowledge a Government agency had declared for an open shop policy and that that policy was counter to the Wagner Act.

"I have had no answer to these assertions from a single solitary member of the Mediation Board," he declared. "The effect, he insisted, is to deny to labor in America 'its rightful claim to live, grow and develop,' and to preclude the union shop to any and every union, regardless of the merits of the cases. That this decision would serve as such a precedent, however, the majority vigorously denied."

In fact, it continued, if the decision were reversed or could be urged as a precedent, the board "would not be able to make recommendations in this controversy at all, because the proposition cuts both ways."

The board, it continued, is not prepared to take the position either that it would always or would never recommend the union shop.

Clear Consensus

The majority went so far as to admit that if it believed failure to grant the union shop would "impose a serious threat to the U. M. W. or threaten its existence," it would not ask that the union waive its demands. If the emergency were being used to tear down the union, Davis said, the majority would not have decided as it did.

The union, he added, is protected against the disruptive activity it professes to fear by the Wagner Act.

The opinion continued, however, by recalling that "the clear consensus of the discussion of the Wagner Act was that such labor agreements (closed and union shops) should be arrived at by collective bargaining with full retention of the right to strike—not by Governmental compulsion."

In passing, the majority scored both the nonunion 5 per cent of the miners and the steel company operators of the mines. The first it condemned for not making a "great contribution" to the nation's welfare by voluntarily joining the union, at least for the emergency, inasmuch as "it is hard to think of a reason why the individual should persist in refusing to join."

As for the steel companies, the opinion continued, "it would seem to be the part of wisdom for the operators involved in this dispute to accept the offer of the U. M. W. with its added assurance of full and uninterrupted production at the mines throughout the period of the contract."

The operators "remained unmoved" by this argument, Davis ruefully admitted.

San Diego Navy Projects Strike Settled

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 11.—Settlement of a strike of 2164 A. F. of L. building tradesmen on 25 million-dollar Navy and Marine defense projects was announced tonight by union leaders.

K. G. Bitter, building trades council secretary, said the craftsmen would return to their jobs at noon tomorrow.

Bitter, in calling the strike, said it was directed at contractors awarded construction jobs on Navy and Marine expansion programs, but Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakeley, Eleventh Naval District commandant, asserted in a statement that labor leaders were "defying only one contractor—the United States Government."

John Murray, Los Angeles, general representative of the carpenters, said the settlement proposal was based on a new interpretation by the Navy on lump sum Government projects which would permit contractors to pay the scale demanded by the unions.

On cost-plus contracts, Murray said, wage differences will be submitted to an OPM board of review for decision.

"We have been assured," Murray said, "that the Navy Department will not interfere with collective bargaining."

"The majority of the work now is being paid the wage scales being asked generally—either being paid now or will be within the next few weeks as old work finishes."

Conferees Held

Seven crafts struck, demanding 12 1/2 cents more per hour. These were the carpenters, laborers, cement finishers, electricians, the setters, iron workers and plumbers.

Twelve other crafts were affected, however, since their men would not pass picket lines.

The return-to-work decision was made after a series of conferences conducted by Harry Malcolm, Federal conciliator, with Navy officers and union representatives, and as the Navy completed arrangements to recruit employees through civil service appointments.

The strike began last Thursday to enforce a demand for $1 a day wage boost.

Admiral Blakeley had termed the strike an "open revolt against the United States Government." This brought a reply from Bitter that "if any of our men were in revolt against the Government, we would be the first to expel them."

Construction had been halted by the strike at projects at the naval air station, the naval training station, the Navy base, a Navy auxiliary field, a Marine rifle range, the Marines Camp Elliott, a Navy radio station at Point Loma, four-million-dollar graving dock and the destroyer base and Navy supply depot, said the settlement also will permit resumption of work on the Federal Work's Agency's $1,675,000 demountable housing project, the first struck, November 3, in the union's demand for wage boosts.

Threat of Second Welders' Strike Fades

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP)—Threat of a second welders' walkout in Los Angeles County shipyards disappeared tonight with a statement from Karl V. Morris, president of the Independent United Welders, Cutters and Helpers Union, that A. F. of L. and C. I. O. union officials had agreed to end any discrimination against members of the Independent Welders' Union.

Morris' announcement, at a mass meeting called to consider further action, elicited a vote of confidence in his course at a Washington conference last week with OPM officials which resulted in termination of a ten-day walkout for recognition as an autonomous union.

Morris told the meeting of about 1000 union members that the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. officials had pledged they would work with the

this test of their resources," the President wrote, "and I am equally as positive that labor will work with the executives for that purpose in mutual—the protection of the lives and the homes of the American people and of every free home on earth."

"No greater burden has ever been thrown on a single industry," the President's letter conceded.

Commenting upon the message, Knudsen said the defense program has expanded so rapidly that it is surprising that the steel industry has been able to keep pace as well as it has. Something over $1,500,000,000 a month, he said, is now being expended in the defense program.

Early next year the rate will be stepped up to more than two billion dollars monthly, will climb later to more than $2,500,000,000.

Armor plate requirements have risen so rapidly, he said, that it has been impossible to keep up with requirements. In tanks alone, the original call for 400 tanks a month has been stepped up to 1,000, and defense officials now are talking of a rate of 2,000 a month.

"Neither government nor industry has anything to be ashamed of in the progress shown in defense to date," he concluded.

Responding to E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., said the industry is ready to do its part and urged government to "tell us what you need and when you need it," and the steel will be delivered.

"If steel is what's necessary to win this fight," he continued, "we ought to be able to do it. The nation's fighting Hitler have a total steel capacity of 130 million tons a year, compared with a combined total of 50 million tons available among the Axis powers and the countries they have conquered. This country alone can produce 88 million tons a year."

Turning to face the array of Government officials behind him on the rostrum, Grace explained that the steel industry is highly integrated and delays in any one division affect the industry's ability to produce on schedule.

"Mr. Hillman," he said, speaking directly to Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General of OPM in charge of defense labor problems, "labor troubles in any one division will slow down production."

Later in the day, R. C. Allen, assistant chief of steel and steel branch raw materials division, OPM, declared that 1942 steel production will be four million tons below the indicated capacity of 87 million tons because of a shortage of 6,400,000 tons of scrap and pig iron.

Lag Is Foreseen

In 1943, he said, steel mill actual output will reach 98 million actual output tons, but will lag seven million tons behind that figure because, by that year, the scrap and pig iron deficit will amount to 9,800,000 tons.

Hillman, who discussed the labor end of the defense program, made no reference to the "captive mine" issue in the steel industry. He praised labor for its cooperation and said that in many instances valuable hours of work are being lost because of a lack of materials for plants.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, asked the steel men to give active support to the price bill due to be voted upon by Congress this week.

Spokesmen for the Maritime Commission, Army, Navy and lend-lease committee wrote Doughton that additional taxes, effective within the next two or three months, are urgently needed to absorb excess purchasing power, ward off inflation, and to pay in cash for the greater part of defense production.

Before leaving Doughton advised the President that himself and Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee, would be glad to confer with the President and Secretary Morgenthau on additional taxes at their convenience.

Mediation Board May Collapse as 2 C. I. O. Members Quit

meeting Sunday in Detroit at the beginning of the annual C. I. O. convention.

Murray and Kennedy's resignations were submitted in a letter to President Roosevelt which reasserted the "perfectly meritorious case" of the miners in the captive mine dispute, where a union shop was sought for 33,000 workers, 95 per cent of whom are already members of the U. M. W.

Murray and Kennedy added: "The uncompromising attitude of the majority opinion is in itself a negation of the basic principles upon which the board was established by you in the effort to promote mediation in lieu of industrial conflict. This opinion discloses that regardless of the merits of any case, labor unions shall be denied the right of normal growth and legitimate aspiration, such as union shop, and the traditional open-shop policy of the antilabor employers shall prevail."

"For these reasons we do not feel that in good conscience we can continue as members of this board," Murray and Kennedy concluded.

Hinted Previously

The two C. I. O. board members had intimated their resignation decision in their minority opinion, which was released at a press conference of William H. Davis, Mediation Board chairman, an hour before Murray's conference.

Asked about Murray's assertion that labor could no longer retain confidence in the board, Davis replied that he believed Murray had been "honestly expressing his feelings at the moment."

"I hope," Davis continued, "that on sober second thought he'll change his opinion."

Informed of this remark, Murray snapped, "I am not aware that I was drunk when I said it."

Davis declined comment last night as to the future of his board when he was told of Murray's resignation and the impending departure of most of the other C. I. O. members.

With respect to Murray, however, he said: "When this storm has blown over I hope I may resume with Mr. Murray, for whom I have the highest regard and deepest affection, the same relationship that we had in the past."

Others About to Resign

Besides Murray and Kennedy, the other alternate C. I. O. appointees to the board who, Murray said, were about to resign, were Hugh Lyons, New England C. I. O. representative; John Brophy, director of C. I. O. Industrial Union Council; James Carey, secretary of the C. I. O.; Clinton Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; and S. H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers.

Murray explained that he had not yet been in touch with and therefore did not know the attitude of the remaining two C. I. O. alternates, Emil Rieve, president of the United Textile Workers, and Herbert W. Payne, vice president of the same union.

Despite Davis' remarks and Murray's profession of faith in the mediation process, there seemed little possibility last night either for the avoidance of a coal strike or continuance of C. I. O. participation in the Mediation Board, in the light of Murray's bristling and almost contemptuous hostility to the majority report of the Mediation Board.

In their minority opinion, Murray and Kennedy charged that the board had not discharged its obligations, as promised, to consider "the merits of the dispute."

Labor 'Denied Rights'

"To the contrary," they added, "the National Defense Mediation Board has now decided that henceforth, regardless of the merits of any case, labor unions must be denied the rights of normal growth and legitimate aspirations, such as the union shop, and the traditional open-shop policy of the antilabor employers must prevail."

U. M. W. is denied," they concluded.

To the argument of the board majority that Federal refusal to demand a closed shop for the miners was essentially in the union's own best interests, Murray made the bristling comment that "Davis should leave the interests of the United Mine Workers to the thinking of the United Mine Workers."

He characterized the board chairman as "presumptuous" in making the argument.

In a scathing reference to the fact that the two American Federal of Labor members of the Mediation Board joined with three public and four employer members in handing down the 5-to-2 decision, Murray said they were guilty of "arch treachery."

A. F. of L. Reverend Self

One of the A. F. of L. representatives, he said, had offered the motion in the first instance favoring the C. I. O. demand, and had argued for it.

"Without advance notice, those same representatives voted against their own motion, their own arguments, their own reasoning. That's one for the book!"

Murray was asked if he believed there were any "extraneous motives" or "other factors" behind the majority decision—an obvious reference to stories that the board failed to grant the union-shop demand for fear of a consequent wave of strikes in other unions seeking the same goal, and to charges that the board majority wished to prevent Lewis from gaining a victory.

He replied that the only "other factors" he could conceive of were a "profound ignorance" on the part of the board majority.

Denies Roosevelt Influence

Earlier, at the board press conference, Davis vigorously denied insinuations that the majority decision was dictated or in any way influenced by White House wishes.

To a reporter's question on this point, Davis shouted, "There was no shadow or shade of White House influence in the proceedings!"

"The President was brought up, if I may say it, by a woman who taught him to act like a gentleman. He did not know our decision beforehand nor ever expressed a preference."

Ironically, the C. I. O. move which almost certainly threatens the existence of the Mediation Board as an effective agency to minimize time lost through strikes was taken during a week when, for the first time in its eight-month history, the board had not a single strike on its calendar.

Since its creation by Executive order on March 19, Davis announced, 103 cases have been certified to it. Of these, 78 cases, involving 510,539 workers, have been finally adjusted and written off as "closed." Of the remaining 24, involving 142,223 workers, hearings have been held in all but four. In the other hearings are now in progress or the parties are awaiting board recommendations or the results of special investigations. In all of the 24 cases, all the men are at work, in response to board requests for continued production.

If the mediation board is forced out of existence, qualified officials predicted, it will probably be replaced by some other Federal mediating agency, perhaps without the presence of employer and labor members.

At the same time, it was considered certain that a strike call in the captive mines would be followed swiftly by irresistible Congressional demands for strike-curbing legislation, which would probably meet with considerable Presidential support.

Murmansk, Archangel Being Cut Off, Nazis Say; Germans Stopped Dead at Moscow, Reds Claim

Leningrad Losing Military Significance, Invaders Declare

By the Associated Press
 Berlin, Nov. 11.—The German armies of the north appeared tonight to be pursuing a steadily developing strategy aimed at cutting off Russia's access to the Arctic Ocean.

Military sources said the Soviet Union's Arctic seaports were being isolated to an increasing degree. (The main ones are Murmansk, on the Kola Peninsula, and Archangel, on the southern shores of the White Sea. Most ships carrying British and American supplies to Russia have been reported using Archangel.)

The Arctic is more difficult to block than the other water inlets to the great Soviet land empire because of the distances from the zones of active warfare.

Advances Reported
 However, German military spokesmen tonight said German and Finnish advances east of Leningrad and operations in the region of Lake Ladoga and Karelia were cutting off the Arctic from the Russian armies, even though the main attacking forces were hundreds of miles from northern shores.

With the Germans now at Tikhvin, 110 miles southeast of Leningrad, and the Finns and Germans making progress in the Ladoga area, these spokesmen said it was extremely difficult to bring American and British material from the northern ports down to Moscow and the Caucasus.

It was conceded that war materials brought to Murmansk or White Sea ports still could be delivered to Leningrad over Lake Ladoga, but the German commentators insisted that Leningrad, "walled off from the rest of Russia by German weapons," is losing military significance.

Overrun Pillboxes
 The high command claimed that in northern Karelia, Finns and Germans had destroyed large parts of a Soviet division after overrunning 700 casemates in a sector not specifically located. It was announced that 1200 prisoners were taken and several times that number killed or wounded.

The German radio said that SS (elite) shock troops penetrated the Leningrad defense ring, occupying 14 pillboxes and then dynamiting them as they retired.

On the central (Moscow) front the radio said German panzer battalion "inflicted considerable losses" in an attack behind a tank spearhead.

The Crimea, however, remained the scene of the hardest fighting. German sources reported that the Russians were trying to evacuate troops from the naval base of Sevastopol by sea and said the German air force was disrupting this.

Finns Reject Hull Peace Offer

ing receipt and study of the full text.—Editor's note.)

The Government, after a long meeting at which the final details of the answer were approved, announced the document had been delivered last night to the United States Minister, Arthur Schoenfeld.

Former Foreign Minister Elias Erkko's newspaper, Ilta Sanomat, took issue last night with the statement by Hull questioning whether the Finnish government could any longer be considered a free agent of the Finnish people if it continues its present policy.

"It proves how wrong ideas about our position have spread even into the United States official quarters, which ought to have means to determine the real facts," the newspaper said.

It reiterated that Finland's army is waging war purely for Finnish objectives, and that the Finnish government is absolutely free of Germany or the Nazi system.

"The real facts," it added, "should help prevent misunderstandings with America, as everybody in this country sincerely hopes."

On November 3, Secretary Hull reminded the Finnish government of information previously given to the Finnish Minister in Washington regarding the possibility of bringing about a peaceful settlement of Russo-Finnish difficulties.

Hull explained that on August 18 the Finnish Minister in Washington Hjalmar Procopé, was informed the State Department had learned the Soviet Union was prepared to discuss a Finnish-Soviet peace on the basis of territorial compensation to Finland.

Up until early November, Hull said, the Finns had shown no desire to investigate this possibility. Last week Helsinki denied any knowledge of such Soviet proposals and the State Dept. then made public documents to show that they had been made known to the Finns.

Meet Jerilyn Jessel...

The President's Day

With a skeleton staff, Mr. Roosevelt worked steadily from breakfast time until 10:40 when he left for Arlington and the Nation's memorial to World War I's Unknown Soldier.

IN MEMORIAM: Through streets cleared of traffic by police, heavily guarded by Secret Service men, whizzed the big, black White House car. In the back with the President sat Secretary of Navy Knox, Secretary of Army Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Military Aide Maj. Gen. Edwin Watson and Capt. John Beardsall. In front rode personal bodyguard Tommy Quarters. In the motorcade following the President were Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine Commandant; Chief of Army Staff Gen. George Marshall and other lords of democracy's defense.

BACK TO WORK! Shortly after his address the President left the chill and windswept national cemetery, headed back to the White House, his office and more work.

CONFERENCE: As soon as he reached his desk, the President's buzzer gave the go signal to his secretariat, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the warring United Mine Workers, came in. As Kennedy exited, Budgeter Harold Smith and his financial woes stepped up for an airing.

MERGER: Next was Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administration captain, to talk over the possibility of putting NYA and CCC together, and getting an equally efficient but less expensive break for America's youth.

END OF A BUSY HOLIDAY: Clearing the decks for action, the President put the lid on further appointments, settled down to a deskful of problems and counterproblems. Two shorts on the White House buzzer brought lunch to his desk, one long one brought a couple of secretaries, and Mr. Roosevelt pitched in, finished off the tag-ends of the paper work over lunch. The afternoon wore on, and even the conscientious Government officials drifted homeward, but the President stayed on at his desk, using the phone frequently, frowning over official reports from abroad. The evening was left guestless, in case more snarls appeared to be untangled before morning.

Wearing Out Invaders
 Official Soviet claims that the long and bitter struggle on a relatively static Moscow front was wearing out the invaders were stressed in a communique which reported:

"A large group of prisoners captured in the last few days on the Western Front gave evidence during questioning of further morale and physical deterioration. All prisoners looked exhausted." While little was said officially during the day of either the Leningrad or far Southern fronts of the Crimea and Donets Basin areas, a Moscow broadcast claimed that three German generals had been killed in the Leningrad area, one of them by guerrillas operating behind the advanced Nazi lines.

Of the Crimea, where the Russians were trying at all cost to hold the ports of Sevastopol and Kerch, the midday Russian communique said nothing specifically beyond reporting the destruction in local action of 70 German tanks and 200 trucks carrying infantry and munitions and the dispersal of two German infantry battalions.

Position of Armies 'Considerably Better,' Russians Assert

By the Associated Press
 Kuibyshev, Nov. 11.—The position of the Red armies before Moscow is "considerably better," with the German advance checked and the Russian counterattacks inflicting heavy losses upon the invaders, a Soviet spokesman asserted tonight.

The Germans have been stopped dead still on every front around Moscow, said S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, at a press conference immediately after a telephone conversation with Moscow.

On the southern front Lozovsky said the German advance toward Rostov-on-Don also was halted. He asserted the Germans were making sensational claims of gains in the Crimea "to cover up the situation near Moscow."

Nazi emphasis on the weather on the central front "shows they are meeting enormous difficulties," he said.

"With our well-equipped army determined to die rather than retreat, the weather can do nothing," said Lozovsky. "The weather helps, but the basic factor is the army."

Nazis Hurl Back
Surrounded, Reds Say

By the Associated Press
 London, Nov. 11.—The Russian armies defending Moscow have thrown the Germans back on the southwestern anchor of the Red line near Maloyaroslavl and have surrounded substantial forces of the invader on the northwestern wing near Volokolamsk, it was reported here tonight.

Each sector is some 65 miles from Moscow, the one below and the other above the capital.

In the third major area of heavy fighting—around Tula, 100 miles due south of Moscow—action by the available accounts was bloodily inconclusive.

Tonight's Russian communique said that in the last four days of fighting on the Tula front Russian units had annihilated more than 1000 Germans, capturing 7 field guns, 19 mortars, 300 cases of mines, 38 machine guns, more than 200 rifles, over 100 horses, two wireless transmitters and much other equipment.

Details of Damage
 It also gave details of damage dealt to German equipment by Russian air action. Russian planes, it said, wiped out an infantry battalion and a cavalry platoon, and on the Western and Southern Fronts smashed 16 German tanks, 60 loaded motor vehicles, 55 ammunition transports and 25 motorcycles.

Everywhere along the Central Front the Germans were reported by the Soviet command to be showing signs of increasing exhaustion. The Russians claimed the destruction by Red bombers alone of 406 Nazi tanks in the Maloyaroslavl sector.

War Sidelights

Gen. Wavell Takes Blame For Libya

New Delhi, India, Nov. 10 (Delayed).—Taking full responsibility for the British setback in Libya last spring, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in India, said today the Germans had counterattacked in Libya at least a month earlier than he had expected.

Gen. Wavell said that practically all trained and equipped troops in the Middle East were ordered to Greece upon the appeal of the Greek government.

"Our conquests in Cirenaica were left to be held by a garrison of partly trained and partly equipped troops. I made a miscalculation there."

"I didn't expect the enemy to counterattack until the end of April at the earliest—by which time I hoped to have back at least part of a seasoned Indian division from Italian East Africa and to have completed the equipment of troops left in the Middle East."

The British armored brigade, an Australian division and an Indian motor brigade. All of these were short of equipment, transport and training."

Nazis Use Horse Carts
 London, Nov. 11 (P).—Bad weather and poor roads "are gradually forcing the Germans to abandon the use of motor cars and armored vehicles and move their troops and war materials in horse carts," the Moscow radio declared tonight.

In one district, Red Star said, "Soviet air scouts discovered a Fascist column of about 700 carts. This column was halted by our machine-gun fire from the air. The Fascists lost half their horses and many carts were destroyed."

No English Yule Cards
 London (Wednesday), Nov. 12 (P). Christmas cards fell victim to the war today when the ministry of supply announced they were banned as part of drastic new restrictions on the use of paper "required for munitions and other essential purposes."

New regulations call for sharp reductions in the output of calendars, programs and directories. Posters advertising motion pictures were ordered cut in half and limited to ten.

Pétain to Get English Funds
 London, Nov. 11 (AP).—Sir H. Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, revealed in the House of Commons today that Britain was permitting Marshal Pétain, French chief of state, to draw a £600 annuity (about $2400) from a Canadian company.

Wood said the annuity was taken out in 1927 and that the government had considered stopping it but thought the matter was "petty."

Wood said an "exception" was made in the case of Pétain because he was the head of a state which "still maintained diplomatic relations with the Dominion of Canada."

Wood said that in view of the Pétain matter, he was considering allowing parents to send money to children who have been evacuated to the United States. Up to now, they have not been permitted to do so.

Italians Hold Serbs Hostage In Slaying

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 11.—The Italian military held 150 hostages tonight in the Dalmatian section of old Yugoslavia on orders of Premier Mussolini while troops searched for the men who threw three bombs at an Italian army band and fired a machine gun at a truckload of troops.

One soldier was killed, more than two dozen wounded and 25 civilians were hurt in the guerrilla attacks, which were the most serious since the Italian annexation of Dalmatia.

The attacks occurred at Spalato late yesterday while the band was on its way to play at the lowering of the colors at nightfall, which the Italians make into an impressive ceremony wherever their troops are garrisoned.

Military bandmen of an Alpine division were the victims of the bomb throwing. A truck loaded with soldiers going on leave was fired upon by hidden machine guns at almost the same time.

The hostages were arrested quickly, the order for their seizure marking the first time Italy has adopted that form of reprisal, heretofore used by the Germans in France and elsewhere. The arrests were made, it was stated, in another part of the Balkan area. What the ultimate fate of the hostages will be was not made clear, but they at least will be held. It was indicated until the persons responsible for the attacks are arrested and tried.

954 Die in Strife Among Serbs
 Budapest, Nov. 11 (P).—The Belgrade newspaper Novo Vreme said today that 954 persons had been killed in the city with German-directed Serbian regular troops in battles from July through October. The paper said 174 had been wounded and 547 captured. All were termed Communists.

Nazis Execute Seven At Prague for Treason
 Berlin, Nov. 11 (P).—Seven persons described by Germans as leaders of a Communist opposition group were executed at Prague today on conviction by a court-martial of charges of preparing high treason, sabotage and illegal possession of weapons.

Anti-Nazi Pamphlets
 Berlin, Nov. 11.—Four Norwegians and three Danes have been sentenced to prison by special courts for distributing anti-German propaganda in the two countries.

The Norwegians, including a father and his son, are charged with having spread in their villages circulars containing the text of a London news broadcast. The Danes were sentenced for distributing propaganda of the now-forbidden Danish Communist Party.

2 Dead, 5 Wounded in Killer's Mad Ride Through London

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 11.—A motorist with a shotgun raced through three London suburbs for three hours on this war-time Armistice Day, shooting into streets, doorways and gardens and killing two persons and wounding five others before the police caught him.

All but one of his victims were women.

Afternoon newspapers pushed the war news aside to make way for a running account of the spread of terror in the quiet suburban roads of Acton, Chiswick and Ealing.

One of the wounded women staggered into a cafe crying.

"The Germans have shot me!" Among the victims was a crippled lawyer named Leslie Ernest Ludford, shot down while he was buying an Armistice Day poppy. Ludford, who died in a hospital, managed to whisper his assailant's name but police did not divulge it, pending a formal charge.

The 6-foot gunman first wounded a neighbor woman in the foot, then walked across the street toward the retreating Ludford and fired at him, point-blank.

As the lawyer slumped to the sidewalk, his assailant raced away in a hired sedan. An alarm was sounded, and London squad cars and bobbies on bicycles spread through surrounding areas on the lookout for him.

Five minutes after Ludford was shot, the man halted outside the Chiswick home of two elderly women, rang their doorbell and returned to his car and waited. When the two women came to the door he shot them both.

One woman at whom he fired saved herself by holding a pile of blankets against her body. The shot blew a large hole in the blankets but did not harm her.

6 Axis Ships Sunk In Mediterranean

Before Giving In Jibuti Will Destroy Piers And Railroad

Vichy, Nov. 11.—The Vichy government announced today that the harbor and railway facilities at Jibuti, French Somaliland, would be blown up before that port of entry to Ethiopia is given up to the British.

Frenchmen, however, were left in the dark as to whether the hungry and encircled colony had already arrived at its "bitter end" of resistance.

An official announcement yesterday said the colony's fate was sealed because "it is impossible to hold on where there is nothing to eat." Today Rene Pélissier, colonial secretary, returned to Vichy from a plane trip to Jibuti and before conferring with Chief of State Pétain, announced the plan to wreck the harbor and railway works before giving in.

Pélissier said the British had demanded passage over French Somaliland for supplies for Ethiopia (the railway runs from Jibuti to Addis Ababa), and that R. A. F. planes had dropped leaflets warning that destruction of the Jibuti facilities would lead to court-martial once the colony was occupied by British forces.

France's Survival Depends on U. S., Ambassador Says

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 11 (AP).—A plea to Americans to "be human to the people you wish to keep independent" was voiced tonight by Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador.

"If the generous American people wish to save the French race and those of friendly countries," the ambassador said in an Armistice Day address prepared for students of the University of North Carolina, "it is imperative that a decision be taken, before the fatal effects of another winter are felt, so that the food and clothing necessary to the survival of the women and children of France be dispatched and distributed under the control of a neutral committee."

Henry-Haye emphasized that his countrymen seek no charity, but only permission to use French funds in the United States for food and clothing shipments to civilians in France and French prisoners of war in Germany.

Italian Losses In Battle Raised To 3 Destroyers

London, Nov. 11.—Hard upon Prime Minister Churchill's declaration that the British "are still masters" in the Mediterranean, the admiralty announced tonight that four Axis troopships or supply ships and two sailing vessels had been sunk there and two armed merchant cruisers and two supply ships seriously damaged in a series of British submarine successes.

This report from Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean fleet, came only two days after smashing British naval action against two Italian convoys off Tarento, Italy—an engagement, incidentally, in which the Axis losses were raised by the admiralty today to three Italian destroyers sunk and two seriously damaged.

There was no immediate report on how many Axis troops might have gone down in the submarine actions announced tonight. The British have been concentrating since spring on trying to prevent men and supplies from reaching the Axis forces in North Africa.

One With Nazi Flag

Three of the four ships sunk went down under torpedo explosions, the admiralty said, while the fourth was sunk by gunfire. One ship was described as of large tonnage and the other three medium-sized.

Of the two sailing vessels sunk, one was flying the Nazi flag, the admiralty's announcement said.

The armed merchant cruisers, Italian, were escorting convoys when the British undersea craft came upon them, the admiralty said. One was of about 8000 tons, the other of more than 5000.

One of the two damaged supply ships described as of medium tonnage, was left in flames after being subjected to gunfire, while the other, a tanker, was hit by a torpedo, the admiralty said.

Finnish Ship Captured

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—The 254-ton Finnish freighter Anneberg has been intercepted and captured by British warships, marine circles said today.

British Ships Bombed

Berlin, Nov. 11 (NS).—German bombing planes, in attacks on two British convoys off Great Yarmouth, damaged and probably sank three freighters of about 3000 tons each, the high command announced tonight.

visit his mother.

According to Mrs. Wilson, Seal is 28 and holder of three collegiate degrees, including an A. B. and an M. A. from Butler University in Indianapolis, and L. L. B. from George Washington University here. She said she was puzzled by his action and hoped that he was not in any difficulty.

Mrs. Wilson said Seal had considerable trouble with his automobile, which was always breaking down and costing him considerable money for repairs.

"Sometimes a person gets so disgusted with something that he wants to get rid of it, but I never heard of anyone actually doing that before," she said.

When he left Washington, Seal was in perfect health and did not seem to have any troubles on his mind, she said.

"He was always a very studious person," Mrs. Wilson said. "He received all his degrees with honors—majored in philosophy at Butler. He never talked much about himself here."

Before getting his job at the Department of Justice six months ago, Seal worked for the Census Bureau, she said.

Langer Blames Ickes and Jury For Conviction

Langer wherever they went, he charged. He admitted under questioning that his accusation of Secretary Ickes was based on "speculation," but he made it abundantly clear that there was no doubt in his own mind as to whom was responsible.

His Request Denied

In circumstantial support of his plot theory, Langer also charged: "That the special grand jury that indicted him was packed with his foes and that he had asked permission to appear before it and the request was denied by the jury foreman."

For the first time in his long legal experience, defense counsel had been denied an opportunity to examine the jury list before the trial started.

That he wired the Federal judge, Andrew Miller, for the jury list and that he never received a reply.

That he "never had a word of conversation" in his life with three of the eight men indicted in the conspiracy with him.

Conviction Set Aside

Langer was convicted on the charge, sentenced to serve 15 months in jail and, in a separate action, ousted as Governor. The Court of Appeals, however, set the conviction aside and Langer was acquitted after two subsequent trials.

The Senator wove the background for his story of the trial with a personal history of 20 rough-and-tumble years of political fighting. The number of his foes, he alleged, was sufficient to account for the charge of "conduct involving moral turpitude" carried in the petition by which North Dakota citizens asked the Senate to unseat him.

Langer said he entered the lists against "the interests" by suing, as a young county attorney, Standard Oil, the Northern Pacific Railroad and lumber and grain companies for taxes they never before had been required to pay. Ultimately, he said, the State collected $1,250,000.

Cities Public Feeling

Andrew Miller, who was to preside at his trial, was attorney for the defendants who immediately retaliated with suits which, although dismissed, stirred public feeling against him, Langer said.

Later, when he was attorney general, Langer said he decided to clean out Minot. His first move was to hire 50 Bureau detectives. His next decision was to hire 10 other private detectives to watch the Burns men. Disguised as laborers, Langer and his men spent three weeks laying the groundwork for raids on Minot's vice joints.

One of the undercover men, however, was decked out in flashy clothes and diamonds and sent into town—as a prospective buyer of a house of prostitution. Langer said the detective was quickly taken in by the town officials and shown suitable places for purchase.

To prevent spreading of the alarm once the raids were under way, Langer seized the telephone office with an armed guard, he related. For this he was later accused, first of inviting a riot, and secondly, of improper seizure. He was acquitted of both charges, he explained. "But, of course, all this didn't help my reputation any."

Befriended by W. C. T. U.

On the other hand, he added, "I also had some friends, because the W. C. T. U. made me a life member."

Langer said while he was Governor Standard Oil lawyers censored his radio speeches and wire services garbled his statements. He determined that a newspaper was imperative. He then told of establishment of the Leader from which operation grew the conspiracy charge.

Langer said the plan was to have every State employee contribute 5 per cent of his salary, for which he would be given a book of subscriptions. By selling the subscriptions, he said, it was possible for the employee to get his money back. "What could be fairer than that?" he quoted himself as telling a State gathering. "Certainly every fellow ought to be willing to do that."

Churchill Puts Off Reckoning Day, Say Nazis

By Louis F. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Nov. 11.—Prime Minister Churchill's speech lining Britain up with the United States in the event of a conflict in the Pacific was denounced by the Japanese press today as an "outrageous but crafty British plot to involve the United States in a war in the Pacific for the protection of British interests."

The press warned that the speech is based on an erroneous estimate of Japan's strength which might necessitate "fundamental correction."

Domei, the official news agency, said Churchill is trying to affect the outcome of the Japanese-American conversations in Washington.

The agency added: "The British and the United States continue to think of the new conditions which have arisen in East Asia in terms of their rights and interests, we are afraid that the Japanese-American negotiations will take direction the very opposite of what is desired by them."

"Great Britain," said Nichi Nichi, which yesterday staged a mass rally at which the United States was denounced as the "ringleader of the peace disturbers," "dropped her insidious mask and is utilizing Mr. Roosevelt's dream of world hegemony in an attempt to drive the United States into a war against Japan as she has already driven the United States into a shooting war in the Atlantic."

"But," this paper added, "Britain has only 51 warships, including only 1 battleship in the Pacific, against Japan's 500," and Britain's troops were described as "mixed."

In the same breath this paper declares that both Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek are merely "faithful dogs of the United States."

Japanese "Burned Up," Newspaper Asserts

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Nov. 11.—The influential newspaper Yomiuri today declared the Japanese people were "burning with anger" over the Churchill speech.

"Britain," said Yomiuri, "is dancing to the tune of the United States and digging her own grave. The Churchill speech indicates British desperation... (Britain) is attempting to prolong Japanese-United States talks."

"The Japanese people are burning with anger yet remaining in complete silence, trusting the government's high policy and iron will to cope with the situation. Churchill desperately attempts to ignite a fire in the Pacific."

"The Japanese are magnanimously cooperating with the United States for a harmonious settlement of the situation."

The 27-year-old father, however, has seen Betty Gay. Bonbrest, a machinist at the Navy Yard, was a halfback on the varsity football squad at McKinley Tech High School in the early 30's. The couple live with their 2-year-old son, Demrie, at 1144 Branch Avenue Southeast.

Demrie was anything but a tiny infant, weighing 7 pounds 12 ounces at birth.

Dr. Steinberg said last night that Betty Gay is not yet in the clear, though her color, respiration, appetite and general body functioning are favorable. Fed with an eyedropper, she is too fragile for any but the most necessary kind of handling. The incubator temperature is kept at 92 degrees.

"Don't uncross your fingers," Mrs. Bonbrest called after the interviewer as he walked out the door.

Employed, Jobless Both Show Decline

Both the number of persons employed and the number unemployed dropped from September to October, Howard O. Hunter, Works Projects administrator, announced in a study made public yesterday.

The seeming paradox was explained by a parallel decline in the size of the total labor force, which dropped from an estimated 5,300,000 in September to 5,200,000 in October. Employment was placed at 49,000,000 in October.

DeGaulle Says U. S. Advances to Fight

France Sees America Going 'Step By Step to Battlefields,' He Asserts

London, Nov. 11.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader, declared in an Armistice Day broadcast tonight that France "sees America advancing step by step toward the battlefields" and said that his country was "tense with hope of victory and the oath of vengeance."

Despite the "shame of disaster and the sufferings of servitude," De Gaulle declared, France today "looks above her sorrows."

"She sees the enemy indeed powerless to reduce our stance and brave ally, England," he said. "She sees her own flags proudly held by loyal soldiers floating among the combatants."

Saddest Armistice Day

Hundreds of Londoners stood before the Cenotaph—monument to the empire's dead—in Whitehall—and observed two minutes' silence with bowed heads in what was described as Europe's saddest Armistice Day.

Usual ceremonies were abandoned and in Westminster Abbey a simple service lasted only 15 minutes with the dean reading prayers over the grave of the unknown soldier. Thousands of poppies and crosses, however, were left in the Empire Field of Remembrance beside the Abbey, and the cenotaph was piled high with wreaths, including those from the King and Queen, Dowager Queen Mary and Prime Minister Churchill.

Men, women and children formed crowds in the streets and sidewalks and many joined the line filing past the monument.

Group May End Quiz Tomorrow On Parking Bill

A special Senate District subcommittee today expects to conclude public hearings on the off-street parking bill and the House-passed 2-cent increase in the District gasoline tax.

Representatives of citizens associations are scheduled to testify today when the subcommittee reconvenes at 9:30 a. m. in room 301 of the Senate Office Building.

Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, is chairman of the subcommittee which began hearings two weeks ago. Testimony from District officials and representatives of civic organizations has embraced viewpoints on the two measures the subcommittee is considering and discussion of the Whitehurst highway improvement plan.

Annapolis to Install Auto Parking Meters

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 11 (AP)—Parking meters of the penny-nickel variety will be installed in the business section of Annapolis.

The city council, unanimously approving a resolution providing for parking meters, authorized its street committee to lay out parking meter zones.

Twelve minutes of parking will be permitted for 1 cent.

VERNE ANDERSON, sign painter, grins happily after his rescue yesterday from a dangling rope ten stories above a Detroit alley. Anderson, who was left dangling in the air when a rope slid from a pulley he was trying to adjust, held on for half an hour until firemen rescued him. His hands stiffened by a raw wind, Anderson was unable to grip the rungs of the fire ladder and had to be carried to safety.

Text of Roosevelt Armistice Speech

Armistice Day address of the President, delivered in the Amphitheater, Arlington National Cemetery:

Among the great days of national remembrance, none is more deeply moving to Americans of our generation than the Eleventh of November, the anniversary of the Armistice of 1918, the day sacred to the memory of those who gave their lives in the war which that day ended.

Our observance of this anniversary has a particular significance in the year 1941.

For we are able today as we were not always able in the past to measure our indebtedness to those who died.

A few years ago, even a few months, we questioned, some of us, the sacrifice they had made. Standing near to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Sergt. York, of Tennessee, on a recent day spoke to such questioners. "There are those in this country today," said Sergt. York, "who ask me and other veterans of World War No. One 'What did it get you?'"

Today we know the answer—all of us. All who search their hearts in honesty and candor know it.

We know that these men died to save their country from a terrible danger, that day, we know, because we face that danger once again on this day.

"What did it get you?"

People who asked that question of Sergt. York and his comrades forgot the one essential fact which every man who looks can see today.

They forgot that the danger which threatened this country in 1917 was real—and that the sacrifice of those who died averted that danger.

Because the danger was overcome they were unable to remember that the danger had been present.

Because our armies were victorious they demanded why our armies had fought.

Because our freedom was secure they took the security of our freedom for granted and asked why those who died to save it should have died at all.

"What did it get you?"

"What was there in it for you?"

If our armies of 1917 and 1918 had lost there would not have been a man or woman in America who would have wondered why the war was fought. The reasons would have faced us everywhere. We would have known why liberty is worth defending as those alone whose liberty is lost can know it. We would have known why tyranny is worth defeating as only those whom tyrants rule can know.

But because the war had been won we forgot, some of us, that the war might have been lost. Whatever we knew or thought

Aid Fight Against Subversion, Patman Urges War Mothers

Mother of men who died in the last war today have an opportunity to bring greater unity to this country, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday told a group of American War Mothers in an Armistice Day service on the Capitol steps.

"Here is an opportunity for the American War Mothers to take an active part in this country's defense by exposing all attempts at teaching, organizing or spreading pernicious propaganda whose purpose is to foment internal strife and weaken our defense efforts," he declared.

"We sympathize with those who deal in the doctrine of unpreparedness through a lack of knowledge, but we do not sympathize with those who believe in and advocate pacifism and unpreparedness for selfish reasons of their own," he added.

The American War Mothers "had the experience of their sons going to war unprepared," Representative Patman said. He warned that they should not be confused with "other organizations bearing similar names, which are opposing preparedness in military training and our foreign policy of all aid possible to Allies."

Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, of Thelmsville, Wis., national president of American War Mothers, spoke briefly.

The invocation was delivered by the Rev. James Shera Montomery, chaplain of the House. The Navy School of Music Band played. Mrs. Florence A. Latham, of Washington, national corresponding secretary of the organization, announced the program.

U. S. Jury Indicts Two D. C. Men in Postoffice Thefts

Baltimore, Nov. 11 (AP)—Edwin M. Van Meter, 70, and Norman V. Garrett, 56, both of Washington, were indicted by the Federal grand jury yesterday on charges of publicly breaking into two Frederick County postoffices last June 7.

Three counts in the indictment charged:

That Van Meter and Garrett broke into the store of Horine & Pennell in Jefferson, Md., part of which is used as a postoffice; that they robbed W. Ross Horine of $1.05, and that they broke into the store of Daniel M. Miller in Knoxville, part of whose store is the postoffice.

Assistant United States Attorney K. Thomas Everingham said Van Meter and Garrett are serving 18-month sentences in the House of Correction on similar offenses prosecuted recently in Frederick County Circuit Court.

Baby With 'Psychic' Blood

FIGURES IN CUSTODY CASE—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wandrei, of Los Angeles, have petitioned a court for permission to adopt Albert Lee Nickerson, 13 months old. They contend the baby's blood had been changed spiritually, that Wendrei's blood was in the infant's veins instead of that of his father, Frank H. Nickerson. Nickerson demands custody of his son, given by his former wife to the Wendreis shortly after birth. Nickerson said his former wife told him little Albert was born dead.

President Warns Of Terrible Peril

nounced as his set purpose "the destruction of our own security and the annihilation of religious liberty, of political liberty and of economic liberty throughout the earth."

President Roosevelt's Arlington address was the highlight of the country's tribute to the men who fell in the war that ended 23 years ago yesterday.

Bareheaded in a raw November wind, Mr. Roosevelt stood at attention as the White House wreath of white chrysanthemums and green ferns was placed against the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and an Army bugler sounded "Taps."

In the flag-draped amphitheater the President told his overflowed audience that Americans who fell in 1917 and 1918 "died to save their country from a terrible danger of that day."

"We know," Mr. Roosevelt said, "because we face that danger once again on this day."

Americans who came to doubt the wisdom of this country's part in the last war "forgot that the danger which threatened this country in 1917 was real."

"Because the danger was overcome they were unable to remember that the danger was present," he said. "Because our armies were victorious they demanded why our armies had fought. Because our freedom was secure they took the security of our freedom for granted and asked why those who died to save it should have died at all."

Others Know Its Value

In Europe today, the President added, the French, Czechs, Poles, Belgians and others "know now what a former victory of freedom against tyranny was worth."

The people of America "believe that liberty is worth fighting for," Mr. Roosevelt declared. "And if they are obliged to fight they will fight eternally to hold it."

Mr. Roosevelt was introduced by Joseph J. Malloy, national chairman of the Armistice Day committee of the American Legion, which arranges the annual observance at Arlington.

Lynn U. Stambaugh, national commander of the American Legion, paid tribute to the Navy men lost in the battle of the Atlantic, saying that they died in the same cause as the Unknown Soldier at Arlington.

America's primary objective is the "defeat of Hitler and what he stands for," Stambaugh said, and the Legion is pledged to support the Government's foreign policy "to the end that the American way of life may survive in a world of free men."

The Legion leader, referring to "murmurings about the morale of this year's Army," said, "Morale is

Japan Wearing U. S. Patience, Knox Declares

By the Associated Press
Providence, R. I., Nov. 11.—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox asserted tonight that this country no longer could ignore Japanese actions which violated American rights, and added that "the hour of decision is here."

In an Armistice Day address, dedicating the vast new naval air base at nearby Quonset, R. I., Knox called for "instant readiness for defense" in the Pacific as well as the Atlantic on the ground that "interests which are vital to our national security are seriously threatened."

Speaking directly to the Providence Chamber of Commerce—which heard an "America 'U' campaign—'U' for unity" dedicated to him—the Navy Secretary declared also that the United States must assume world leadership in making a future peace founded on justice rather than revenge. To preserve peace, he said, an entire community of nations must be ready to move against the aggressor.

"Hour of Great Danger"

Knox spoke first of what he called grim possibilities on the far side of the Pacific, and termed the present "an hour of great danger."

"In the last few years," he said, "the efforts this Government has made to maintain amicable relations with the Japanese have been long suffering and patient to a degree almost unmatched in the history of international relations. We have cooperated with every liberal and peace-loving element in Japan, and we are still ready to cooperate with those elements."

"We have been patient while, repeatedly, our rights have been violated. We have continued to permit supplies to go to Japan, although we could very well have stopped them on the ground that we needed such supplies for our own defense. We have felt that in the interests of peace we must be tolerant and take risks."

"But there comes a time in the life of every man, and every nation, when principles cannot be sacrificed and when vital and essential rights can no longer be ignored; a time when to go further would mean that our liberty and forbearance would be misunderstood. We are moved and actuated in the Pacific, no less than in the Atlantic, solely by considerations of self-defense."

Four Points for Future

In looking to the future, Knox cited four points, the first of which he said was a peace based on "justice and righteousness" rather than revenge.

"Free interchange of goods, and free access to raw materials must be the cornerstone of any new world to come," he added.

"The third basic point on which we must base any new order is the assumption by the United States of the position of world leadership to which its material resources and stable Government call it."

"And, finally, any world order which we attempt to establish after the present war . . . must rest ultimately on a basis of force. . . . we must establish some sort of international order in which the entire community of nations will move against any country which deliberately invokes bloodshed to achieve aggressive purposes."

U. S. Policies Provoke War, Walsh Asserts

By the Associated Press
Boston, Nov. 11.—Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, describing the United States Government's policies as war-provoking, insisted in an Armistice anniversary pronouncement that "not one single hostile act has been taken against the territorial integrity of this country" by any other nation.

"The policies of this Government, from the very outset of the war, have been war-provoking," declared Walsh, chairman of the Senate's Naval Affairs Committee.

Although nothing in the legislation authorized the conveying of vessels by United States naval craft, Senator Walsh said, "our naval vessels have been directed, under orders from the President, to enter combat zones and to engage in conveying vessels without knowledge or consent of the Congress and, further, to hunt down and sink ships of nations with which we maintain diplomatic relations to this very hour."

"To my mind, the sending of youths to fight on the bosom of the Atlantic is just as reprehensible as to enter combat zones and to engage in conveying vessels without knowledge or consent of the Congress and the American people."

Senator Walsh, who voiced his views in an Armistice Eve broadcast from Station WNAO, asserted that the cause "of the widespread unrest in this country and the lack of a response to the Administration's plea for national unity" could be found in "the lack of candor on the part of the President and his Cabinet in their dealings with Congress and the American people."

Give Faculty Chance To Fight, Students Ask

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 11 (AP).—Syracuse University students circulated a petition today urging leaves of absence for faculty members who have urged declaration of war on the Axis so their professors "may immediately volunteer their services to the forces of the United States."

Gen. Marshall Warns Nation Of Sabotage

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Gen. George C. Marshall warned the Nation last night to be on guard against a "sudden and widespread attempt" by the Axis powers to sabotage the entire American munitions industry and critical utility and transportation facilities.

The Army chief of staff declared in a radio address that already the Axis has a propaganda campaign under way in the United States designed to break down Army discipline. Such "German scheming," he stated, has "confused and prejudiced" soldiers' families and "militarized" members of Congress.

"This process of misrepresentation and distortion has been carried on with persistence and skill," Marshall said. "We cannot continue to be naive and credulous. On the contrary, we should set ourselves with determination to see this thing through as a united people."

Urges Citizens Defense Corps

He urged the wholehearted cooperation of every community toward organizing the Citizens Defense Corps. The establishment of this voluntary body of air-raid wardens, auxiliary police, signal and first aid units, he said, "will serve a vital purpose in completing our general organization for the security of America and... exert a strong influence in combating secret and destructive efforts to divide and confuse our people."

Marshall stated that it is not difficult for people living along the coasts to see the need for air-raid warning service, but was "more difficult to convince people in the interior of the country that some of the most serious schemes for destructive action against our interests are possibilities in their midst."

"It seems best to speak very frankly on this particular subject," he continued. "The Government today is constantly on guard against damage to our industries or their products, but we must be prepared for a sudden and widespread attempt at sabotage directed at the entire munitions industry, including the critical utilities and transportation facilities."

"Nothing should be taken for granted. We should assume that at a given moment wholesale sabotage may be attempted by the far-reaching organization which has secretly and ceaselessly been planning for just such an occasion."

Despite the "seriousness of the possibilities" of sabotage, the Army chief said he was personally more concerned over the effects of the "clever methods of Axis propaganda which for a long time have been directed against the development of our entire defense program."

His daily mail, bringing letters from families worrying about their boys in the Army, reflects such propaganda, Marshall said. They indicate that the folks back home have been led to believe that soldiers lack food, proper shelter and medical attention.

Such letters, he added, come from members of Congress "who have been similarly misled."

General Cites Example

As an example of such "seriously disturbing" results from Axis propaganda, Gen. Marshall cited the public debate last summer over the draft extension bill, when public attention was centered on the Army.

"In this connection," he stated, "I wish to read an extract from the instructions issued by the German ministry of propaganda last April. 'It is more effective,' these instructions state, 'when the American press provides propaganda for our mill than if we do it ourselves.'"

"Now what happened last summer," Marshall continued. "The debate was on the criticism of our good faith and judgment were naturally frequent, and the more unfavorable reactions of individual soldiers were broadcast. Mass desertions were reported to threaten the Army in October."

As one result, he said, comments and conclusions "seriously prejudicial to our interests" appeared throughout the Latin American press, combined with "clever distortions of the facts."

"But the cleverest move—to capitalize on this golden opportunity for sabotage," the Army chief added, "was a rumor skillfully planted among the men in National Guard units that a large number of soldiers, more than a thousand, had deserted en masse from a certain Regular Army division... The actual fact in this matter was that the division in question had one lone deserter in the period referred to."

Calling upon the Nation to awaken to the "dangerous possibilities of the present situation," Marshall declared:

"We should realize that the more we, as a Nation, influence the course of this war, the more important it becomes for us to protect every phase of our national life against the efforts of the Axis powers to deter or weaken us."

British Woman Remembers World War Dead

Knights of Columbus, Jewish Veterans Mark Armistice Day

Columbus Law Dean Says Propaganda Is Flooding Country

Asserting that the United States is "flooded" with propaganda now as it has never been in the past, Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, Dean of Columbus Law School, speaker at the annual Armistice Day observance under the auspices of the State Council of the Knights of Columbus, last night urged citizens "to acquaint yourselves with the facts."

Propaganda is not designed to be factual, he said, pointing out some of the devices used to influence those persons who refuse to analyze ideas.

The stage of the Knights of Columbus Hall, 920 Tenth Street Northwest, where the meeting was held, was decorated with a cardboard silhouette representing the Unknown Soldier's Tomb. State Deputy James F. Kehoe presided and the Rev. Edward A. Fuller, S. J., State chaplain, delivered a prayer for peace. Past District Deputy Joseph B. McCann called the meeting to order.

Among the guests of honor was William T. Slattery, national commander of the Irish War Veterans. Earlier in the day Francis P. Matthews, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, was among those attending Armistice Day ceremonies in Arlington as guest of the national commander of the American Legion, Lynn Stambaugh.

Supreme Knight Matthews accompanied by State Deputy James F. Kehoe and State Warden William Mulligan placed a commemorative wreath on the grave of the Unknown Soldier in ceremonies participated in by all national fraternal orders.

Kaufman Warns Of Many 'Dupes' Of Nazis In U. S.

Benjamin Kaufman, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans, warned last night their are many "dupes" of the Nazis here. "German generals without uniforms and Goebbels' lieutenants without commissions."

Speaking in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest, at Armistice Day services under the joint auspices of Washington Post No. 58 and its Ladies Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans, Kaufman asserted: "We can have no anti-Semitism here. When we turn to hating each other on the basis of the church we worship in, or the color of our skins, or our political party membership, we look forward to the death of American democracy."

The Rev. Richard E. Evans, another guest speaker on the program, spoke on the symbolic unity of "The Unknown Soldier and the Bill of Rights."

Both are immortal, he stated, "their spirit lives on from generation to generation." Both represent democracy, he said, for the Unknown Soldier may be from any number of creeds, while the Bill of Rights is "the great guarantor of democracy."

Five things make democracy great, the Rev. Mr. Evans asserted. These are, "goodwill, responsibility, enthusiasm, appreciation and triumph."

Nat S. Silverberg, Post No. 58 commander, extended the welcome and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld read the Presidential proclamation. Rabbi Henry Sergal gave the invocation. Other talks were by Mrs. Ethel Novak, president Post No. 58 Ladies Auxiliary, Mrs. Miriam G. Hoffman, national president, and Maj. Lawrence R. Melton, national commander. Disabled American War Veterans. Music was by the Navy Band Orchestra.

Many Different Agency Workers Report for Duty on Holiday

An unexpectedly large number of employees reported to work yesterday at OPM and allied defense agencies, and as a result the cafeteria in the new Social Security Building, prepared for a decided Armistice Day slump, found itself swamped by long lines of hungry workers at lunch time.

The workers were present because William S. Knudsen, director general of OPM, had requested them to "donate" their time to the national defense effort. Most nonmilitary defense agencies reported a virtual 100 per cent turnout by their employees.

The cafeteria, anticipating a smaller turnout, operated only two service lines instead of the customary four lines.

Only other major Government agency to appeal to its employees to work was the Civil Service Commission, which reported a 75 per cent operating capacity. The Army, Navy and nondefense agencies gave all but a skeleton force the day off.

Stores Do Big Business

The contrast between those who worked and those who took the day off was best illustrated at the new Social Security Building which accommodates civilian defense agencies and a considerable section of the Army Ordnance Department.

During most of the day, OPM offices were lighted and buzzing with activity while numerous adjoining offices occupied by the Army were locked up. After lunch, however, some of the working offices relented and gave their employees the rest of the afternoon off.

A check of the Munitions and Navy Department buildings showed normal activity suspended with an employee or two in each office stopping in briefly to check the mail.

Gen. George Marshall, Chief of Staff, and Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson stopped by at the munitions Building after their visit to Arlington Cemetery in the morning to hear the President speak.

Washington department stores which stayed open to take advantage of holiday business experienced a rush of business comparable to normal Saturday afternoon or Thursday evening activity when Government employees are off.

Theaters Full

Lines in front of downtown theaters indicated that many employees were using the day off to see the movies. Taxi drivers who cruised in the downtown area reported benefiting from this extra activity.

29th Division Honors Dead With Parade In Cheraw, S. C., and Services at Camp

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent

Cheraw, S. C., Nov. 11.—The Twenty-ninth Division honored its World War dead here today with a parade through this town, while in base camps near Morven, N. C., units of the division held services for their own.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, in a brief address after the parade, thanked the people of this community for the hospitality which they have shown the officers and men of his command. He reminded them that the men of the "Twenty-ninth are citizens soldiers," undergoing considerable hardship to fit themselves to fight successfully should the need come.

All Groups Represented

Included in the parade were one battalion from each of the division's four infantry regiments, marching with fixed bayonets behind the bands of the 116th (Virginia) and the 179th (Maryland) Infantry. Taking the review with Gen. Reckord were members of his staff, J. H. Ramsauer Mayor of Cheraw, and L. C. Wannamaker, commander of the Cheraw American Legion Post and post State commander.

In the camp of the 111th Field Artillery, the regiment formed to do honor to its members who served in the first World War. These 15 officers and men received the salute of the regiment after an address by Col. E. Schlater Montague, regimental commander.

At Camden, S. C., Lieut. Gen.

Hugh A. Drum, commanding First Army, warned men of his command that they must be prepared to fight whenever and wherever the security of the United States is threatened. His address was broadcast to troops in their base camps. "Every effort you and your fellows make," Drum declared, "supports the President of our Nation when he speaks to those who would trample upon our freedom. Your efforts and the efforts of your fellows back up the words of our President when he deals with those who understand force, and force alone.

"Some of you, as you plot through the dust, weary, perspiring and at times hungry, may feel that you are playing an unimportant part in your country's present or future welfare. What you are doing may appear to be of little consequence and perhaps a great discomfort and annoyance. But don't you believe it.

"Let me assure each of you that what seems most unnecessary and unwelcome is really helping to prepare this Nation to stand against anyone's attempt to overthrow our ways of liberty and independence. Every advance in strengthening our Army, every success in completing our training program, support the President."

Write Case-File Order

Gen. Drum told the soldiers of 1941 how those of 1918 were told the end of the war had come 23 years ago today. He quoted the "case-file" order which he himself wrote as

Hecht Store Opens New Home Tonight

With ceremonies dedicated to national civilian defense, the Hecht Co. will formally open its new building at Seventh and E and F Streets Northwest at 8 o'clock tonight, when Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, is guest of honor.

Highlight of the evening will be delivery of a $10,000 defense savings bond by Mrs. Wallace to Alexander Hecht.

Exhibits throughout the building will include Russian crown jewels valued at $500,000. There will be many scientific exhibits and on the fourth floor a special civilian defense exhibit.

Fairness will arrive at the E Street door at 8:15 p. m. and will be escorted to the Pendleton Galleries on the fourth floor. They will include Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the mint; Mrs. Maria Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Edmund Starling, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Lionell Atwill, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. John Casswell, Mrs. Joust Shouse, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Edward Stettinius, Jr., Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Mrs. Blair Banister and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert.

The celebration will be concluded with the playing of the National Anthem by Abe Lyman and his Californians.

Two Youths Face Weapons Charge Today

Two 17-year-old Baltimore youths, both former inmates of the Maryland School of Correction, will be tried today in Alexandria Police Court on charges of possessing concealed weapons and leaving the scene of an accident.

The boys were arrested in Alexandria Monday night after a 17-mile chase by a Woodbridge (Va.) filling station proprietor, who charged they left his service station without paying for gasoline and oil purchased. They are wanted by Prince William County authorities in connection with theft of the gasoline; King William County officials hold a warrant for their arrest on an auto-theft charge, and the youths told Alexandria police yesterday they are wanted by Baltimore police for a $800 robbery.

Police said yesterday they probably will be turned over to other authorities following their hearing in police court today.

Plumpton Named Raid Warden Aide

Vincent W. Plumpton was elected Monday night to serve as deputy air-raid warden for the Burieth area at the regular meeting of the Burieth Citizens Association.

Individually, it was reported in yesterday's Post that Col. R. Chesney Bishop was selected for the warden's position. Col. Bishop will serve with John S. Gorrell as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Young British Refugees Laud U.S. Generosity

Arthur Jenkins, British M. P. and parliamentary private secretary to Lord Privy Seal Attlee said yesterday he had heard "endless praise of the generosity of the American people" in a visit with 14 British children whose school has been transferred across the Atlantic to Clover Croft, near Warrenton, Va.

The children, ranging in age from 2 to 14 and accompanied by two teacher-guardians, have been at Clover Croft more than a year; their school having formerly been located in Sussex, near the English Channel. At Clover Croft they are the guests of Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post, and Mrs. Meyer. Jenkins said his visit at Clover Croft yesterday was "one of the greatest joys of his visit to this country. He came here last month with Attlee and expects to leave in a few days.

"I found the children living under ideal conditions—a delightful home, charming countryside and an abundance of everything," Jenkins said. "It did me a lot of good to see these children and listen to their many praises of their new home."

"These children were billeted out of England," he added, "but they are developing a very great respect for their American friends, which will last long into their lives."

"To Mr. and Mrs. Meyer and to the people of Warrenton I would like to say a big 'thank you,'"

Jenkins said, adding that he would enjoy reporting his impressions to the children's parents when he returns to Britain.

Boy, 2 Girls Are Indicted In Slaying

By the Associated Press

Bel Air, Md., Nov. 11.—Sheriff Walter E. Bennington said he was notified today by the Harford County grand jury that three Alexandria, Va., high school students have been indicted for the slaying of Granger G. Browning, 38-year-old Mount Olive, N. C., carpenter. The sheriff said the trio, Herbert H. Cox, Jr., 16; Ida May Price, 15, and a girl, 14, were indicted for the slaying of Browning.

All three were indicted on the slaying charge. Browning was killed last month near Conowingo, Md., while on an automobile trip from Alexandria. Cox and the girls were apprehended at Portland, Me., where Browning's blood-stained car was found. In addition, the sheriff said the two girls were indicted on charges of being accessories after the fact.

Bennington said the trial "probably will start the week after next" because the court usually hears appeals cases starting next Monday. Meanwhile, State's Attorney D. Paul McTabb ordered a man arrested in Mercer, Pa., yesterday, to be held as a material witness. Bennington and Sgt. J. J. Cassidy, of the Maryland State police, returned the man to Bel Air by airplane last night. The officers said the man introduced Browning to the young people and made arrangements for them to leave Alexandria in Browning's automobile when they decided to run away from home.

Civic Groups Unite For Defense Work

A plan for cooperation with three other citizens associations in civilian defense work was approved last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association. The other associations are Central Business Men's Citizens Association, Mid-City Citizens Association and Seventh Street Citizens Association.

Restriction of parking and unloading of vehicles during rush hours on arterial highways and Congress' decision to provide 100 additional policemen in the District were approved. A movie which illustrates the work of the Community Chest in Washington was shown.

SINGING POWERS MODEL TO MAYFLOWER, Cynthia Carmichael, recently one of the loveliest of blond Powers models, will stop on the Mayflower Lounge bandstand tomorrow evening at the new slugs with Dick Koon's Orchestra.

This slugging voice while she was parading with Mr. Powers' celebrated band, has already proved that her warbling is as beautiful as her curves. She's just completed 14 weeks at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal where she sang for assorted waiting royalties and near-royalties.

This eye is "Tennis Night" in the Metropolitan Room with Band Leader Layton Bailey directing the Western brand stars in what he calls "Tennis formal attire," meaning white tie and tails and a 10-gallon hat. Fur, reds, blues and greens are the color theme. Both Tennis and near-Tennis are invited to join the "Lame Star" party.

KING COLE BOOKS BOB PACE. That outstanding radio singer, Bob Pace, will arrive in the King Cole Room next Monday, sing duets with Evelyn Knight as well as solo in his popular air-wave style. This booking will unite leading singers of two radio studios. Evelyn sings regularly over C. B. S. and Bob is a WJWS favorite.

A JUKE BOX ACE is Don Carper who's better known in Washington as maestro at Cafe Caprice. Upward of 12 1/2 of Don's records have been recently distributed in juke boxes and he'll soon do a couple of flashy new patterns.

CELESTIAL SUBTLETY dominates the new Lotus revue. Beautiful Jade Ling goes international in dances that is a magical spell of softly woven movement and whirling tissues of black and silver. Chiang Wan stays strictly on the Chinese side, does virtuosic and acrobatic tricks in the classic tradition of China with deadly looking pieces of Oriental cutlery. If one of 'em ever slips, he's the most novel seen in Washington this year.

Champion night spot baby (hold everything!) is Paul Young's 6 months old son. This bouncing junior partner in Paul Young's is 31 inches tall, weighs 25 pounds (10 pounds more than the average for his age), has a golden smile and a kewpie curl on top of his head.

ACES THREE are the new Larry Bennett music makers at El Patio. Handsome Larry leads from the bass. Billy Marino sings and guitars. Bernie Michaels alternates on the vibes, piano and accordion. . . . They're so breezy but never noisy. Around midnight they cut loose with highly seasoned parodies. . . . They're so good that they play for a solid five years at New York's snooty Hotel Des Artistes, the home of such celebs as Ray Noble and Fanny Hurst.

MOVIE MEN IN NEPTUNE. The Ranko Hawaiian Serenaders now appearing in the Neptune Room are under contract to Warner Brothers. They make a musical movie short every few months. They provided the melodies of the islands in the "Merry-Go-Round of 1938." . . . Nothing less than intriguing is the "evolving rhythms" of the new Harding-Moss-Joyce Trio. They produce dizzy piano-organ-percussion swing while rotating on a big white circular stage that looks like a giant wedding cake. And you should see the fingernails of Songstress Billie Joyce. They're green or blue according to her nail polish whim-of-the-day.

JANE'S IN GIRL-BAND. Jane Marlow, of Restaurant "321" has joined Sylvia Kaplowitz, all-girl radio orchestra. She's the only violinist in the band. You'll be hearing them on Mondays over WMAL for 13 weeks.

ART. BUJINKS! Carmen Cavallaro, of the Cosmos Room, is the apparent No. 1 inspiration of oodles of Washington's amateur artists. They've presented him with sketches, charcoal and pen-and-ink drawings and one oil painting of his. The blue skies, blue seas and golden islands that glorify the stone walls of the Viking are the work of one of the new spot's waiters, James Bell. They're really astonishingly beautiful, clever too, in the use of the make-up and hard-to-handle spaces. . . . All of Brian Brown's murals in the new Balalaika are a pure delight, but we have a special weakness for the slithering snake flecked with huge snow flakes. Burt Lopatin, owner of Burt's here.

Tars From British Warships To Play Soccer Here Tonight

Lord and Lady Halifax and members of the staff of the British Embassy will attend rugby and soccer games tonight at Griffith Stadium between sailors of His Majesty's aircraft carriers Formidable and Illustrious.

Sailors and officers of the ships will arrive this afternoon from the naval base where the carriers are undergoing repairs. The sailors will be entertained at the American Legion headquarters, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, preceding the game.

YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL. Conchita, who's dancing with Larry at the Troika. She's a little bottle of tabasco sauce, and looks it in her scarlet Carmen Miranda get-up. . . . Mary Byrne, the Texan, singing sweetheart of Mayfair. She looks like a dream walking in her white silk jersey formal with heavy gold jewelry set with red stones. . . . Carmela Lazari, Hi Hat's soprano nightingale with the Mona Lisa smile. She's currently setting off her dark hair and eyes with an evening frock of red and black and long red earrings. . . . Virginia Solheim, of the Madrigal, most appropriately named singer in town. She hails from Virginia and has that Southern smile and accent.

OF RELATIVE. Jim Cole, of the Brown Derby's "Three Loose Nuts" is the brother of King Cole, leader of the noted King Cole Trio, and "Jelly Bean" Anderson, of the "Nuts," is the brother of Jack Benny's Rochester.

JOYOUS SOUNDS IN THE NIGHT. "Madeline" as played high and handsome by Russ Hawn's Band in the Versailles. Russ thinks "Madeline" is the number to succeed "I Don't Want To Set the World on Fire." . . . "Mama Maria," a Pan-American honey that's being organized no end effectively by Ida Clarke in the Lounge Riviera. . . . Ralph Cannon singing "My Bill" as "My Lil" in the Rainbow Room. "Wouldn't I look silly crooning 'My Bill,' he said. "People would wonder about me." Will Goff and Durward Bowersox playing two violins so that they sound like three in the Plymouth. They do it with some kind of double harmony. . . . That splendid Russian army song being presented by Barrington Sharma in the Pall Mall Room. We can neither pronounce nor spell its title.

Mme. Chiang Too Busy To Visit Mrs. Roosevelt

Chungking, China, Nov. 11 (AP).—Authoritative sources said today that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had invited Mme. Chiang Kai-shek to go to America several months ago to discuss war relief in China, but that Mme. Chiang had been unable to accept because of her many duties here.

School of Music Band and the Washington Gas Light Co. Band will provide music at the games. After the games, the sailors will stay overnight at Fort Myer and tomorrow will go on a sight-seeing tour of Washington before returning to the naval base.

Proceeds of the games will go to the Community Chest, Bureaus for Britain and the British-American Ambulance Corps. Mark G. Miller, chairman of the ticket sales committee, said he expects an attendance of 20,000. Ceremonies preceding the games will start at 8 o'clock.

3,000 Jobs Open Stores Face Yule Labor Shortage

Expecting the biggest Christmas boom of Washington's history, retailers here are confronted with a labor shortage unequalled since World War days.

The District Employment Center estimated at least 3,000, and possibly 3,000, part-time workers would be needed by local retailers—an increase of 1,000 to 2,000 over last year's total of approximately 1,000 "extras" hired.

Coupled with the severe shortage of available workers, this makes for an "impossible" situation, according to an Employment Center spokesman.

What extra help that can be obtained is unskilled in sales work, for which there is the greatest demand, and the large majority is even unfit for training, it was said.

However, trying to make the best of it, a number of department stores already are taking on "green" clerks to give them some training and experience before the rush begins.

The retailers find their rolls of reserves greatly depleted, with part-time employees finding full-time jobs in defense industries. Government offices and the armed forces, adding to difficulties caused by the general increase of employment opportunities.

The District Employment Center's active file of unemployed—all colors and types from field laborers to lawyers—totals 10,000, compared with a total of 27,500 this time last year and 62,000 three years ago.

Consequently, the center is remaining open from 6 to 9 p. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays in an effort to obtain additional registrants, marking the first time night hours have been kept since establishment of the center in 1934.

In addition to the 3,000 workers sought by local retailers, the City Postoffice is looking for 3,000 extra clerks, carriers and miscellaneous laborers, a 10 per cent increase over the number hired for the rush last Christmas.

However, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke said he was anticipating no difficulty in obtaining that number since most are recruited from Washington universities and colleges.

Former Christmas-time Postoffice employees are now being signed up and prospective new workers will be interviewed November 27. All will start work the middle of December.

Peaks in hiring of temporary workers by department stores and other retailers are expected about November 13 and December 1.

The unprecedented amount of Christmas money expected to be in circulation during the shopping period, resulting from enlarged Government and private business pay-rolls, will be augmented early in December by the distribution of $5,500,000 by Christmas Savings Clubs of 10 banks.

United States Bank Stockholders File Suit Here

A committee of stockholders of the defunct United States Savings Bank have filed suit in District Court against depositors of the bank, asking that a compromise agreement made between the plaintiffs and defendants be held "valid and enforceable."

In a suit brought for the depositors last week, Justice Oscar R. Lohrman ruled that the agreement was not binding to the depositors who signed it, asserting that they signed without full knowledge of the facts.

The agreement, signed by only a portion of the depositors, limited interest payments on their claims to 3 per cent. They asserted at that time that they signed on the understanding that about 5,000 non-signing depositors would get 3 per cent also, but discovered that the non-signers would receive a full 12.5 per cent.

In filing the new suit, the stockholders asserted that "the Comptroller of the Currency has taken the position that he cannot proceed with the liquidation of the bank until the validity has been settled by judicial decree."

Chile's President, Ill, Turns Over Office to Another

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 11 (P).—President Pedro Aguirre Cerda, who took office three years ago as head of the only popular front government in the Western Hemisphere, has given over the executive powers to Generalissimo Aguirre Mendez, leader of the radical party, declaring that his health made it impossible for him to continue his duties.

Mendez first was appointed minister of the interior, to give him cabinet rank, then Aguirre named him vice president and turned the presidency over to him.

It was announced that Aguirre's retirement was temporary and was due to an attack of bronchitis and grippe from which he has suffered severely of late.

Defense Brings Influx of Skilled Construction Men

Membership rolls of most unions affiliated with the Washington and Construction Trades Council (A. F. of L.) are swelling with workers being brought in from other cities to share the full-time and overtime bounty, it was learned yesterday.

According to John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council, the normal 14,000 membership of council unions has jumped to 22,000 since the start of defense activity which has brought a housing and office building boom to Washington.

However, no actual shortage of labor has developed, Locher stated, because the council has been able to fill all demands for labor within short notice through the regular union channels and by taking advantage of council contacts with other cities where there is little construction activity.

Some Fare Badly
Only a small minority of unions have been hit by the defense activity thus far, Locher said. These include marble setters, paperhangers, plasterers, slate and tile workers. Work has been slow in these unions because only a minimum of plastering, marble setting and paperhanging, is needed on most defense construction.

These men, however, are finding work among defense industries or by shifting to booming building trades such as the carpenters, bricklayers, cement finishers, or metal workers in which they may have some experience.

Perhaps one of the least fortunate are the plasterers who are suffering from the virtual elimination of plaster ceilings on big buildings. Acoustic tile has grown in popularity recently for large ceilings, and little work is required to affix the tile to a ceiling. Defense homes make considerable use of plasterboard, another plaster substitute.

Marble workers, who enjoy boom times only when big monumental buildings are being constructed, are another group that has not been busy. Architects planning defense buildings generally strip them down to bare essentials to get them constructed in the shortest possible time. Good marble work is a time-consuming skill which has been eliminated in many instances.

Revolution Afoot
Priorities have worked havoc with the building industry but has not hurt the building worker's pay envelope in Washington because of defense activity. However, many small contractors have had difficulty getting work and council members fear that a quiet revolution may be taking place in the local contracting field as a result.

Most of the contractors on defense jobs, it was pointed out, are big concerns which score the little jobs of home building and other small construction work which is the life blood of Washington building activity during peace time. These contractors, operating interstate businesses, are expected to leave Washington when defense activity collapses here.

Veteran building labor leaders recall that during the last war many small contractors were run out of business and that workmen were faced with an entirely new set of bosses when the war ended. The council is making an effort to keep small contractors in business by urging a greater spread of local construction work.

The mechanical trades have been in considerable demand since the defense building work started. Plumbers and sheet metal workers have been particularly busy with many calls being sent to other cities for additional help.

Some Remains
A worker from another city who comes to Washington generally secures a work permit from a Washington local of his union after he presents credentials to show that his home union dues are paid up. Generally, he pays subsequent dues.

installments to the Washington union until the work ends and he packs up and goes home. Some become fond of Washington and arrange to have their membership permanently transferred.

Nonunion workers who can demonstrate that they can find employment if given union clearance have been allowed to join local building trades unions and share in the defense work. Usually, they have been required to pay initiation fees. Some concern has been expressed that local unions will be faced with a big surplus of workers, particularly carpenters and painters, at the end of the emergency.

To take full advantage of the chance to keep most building trades members working full time, and frequently overtime, the council is cooperating with individual contractors to keep the work properly distributed.

Way to Keep Everybody Happy
Recently, the War Department made a sudden request for a gang of bricklayers to raise a sample wall on the new building in Arlington. Arrangements were made to transfer the men from work at the airport temporarily. Completion of the job at the airport was not affected by the temporary shifting of bricklayers, and in that way, everybody was kept happy.

Swelling membership rolls have resulted naturally in swelling union treasuries. According to Locher, much of this money is being socked into "defense" funds and other reserves to be used to ease the shock of readjustment to normal conditions.

Canal Zone Is Big Boom Town With Emphasis on Speed

By Chandler Diehl
Associated Press Staff Writer
Balboa Heights, Panama Canal Zone, Nov. 11.—The watchword echoing through the jungles from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean side of this narrow isthmus is speed and more speed.

Army construction, Navy construction, canal construction and highway construction are buttressing the defenses of the 50-mile-long "big ditch" at a cost of half a billion dollars.

Technicians, skilled workers, common laborers pour in every day by plane and ship. New towns such as Balboa Heights, Margarita and Cocle have sprung up, complete to postoffices and movies.

Hotels and homes are jammed beyond capacity. The overflow spills into the Republic of Panama where rents have bounded upward.

Millions of dollars come into circulation every month. The payroll for United States Government work alone totals up to better than five million dollars a month in the 10-mile-wide Canal Zone.

The money is getting results quickly and efficiently.

Top item is the 277 million dollar group of projects under the Canal Zone administration. They include a third set of canal locks, providing almost an all-new-water thoroughfare across the isthmus for ships of all sizes.

85 Millions for Army
Another Canal Zone administration group of projects totaling 100 million dollars is labeled for special defense.

Army projects started and completed in the program total some 85 million dollars for new barracks, hangars and runways.

Navy projects come to some 40 million dollars, providing, among other things, a new naval base at Balboa on the Pacific approach to the canal, and a new breakwater on the Atlantic side to permit swift take-offs and smooth landings for patrol planes scanning the Caribbean.

Other millions are going into new highways, including the first broad trans-isthmian thoroughfare and other strategic roads such as those linking the new Rio Hato interior air base with Caribbean headquarters at Quarry Heights, overlooking the canal.

Construction of the third set of locks calls for many grand-scale contracts.

The task of excavating 40 million cubic yards of earth and rock already has started. Concrete required for this construction will measure about five million cubic yards.

The million-dollar Miraflores swing bridge, now being built, will provide direct rail and highway access to the west side of the canal for the first time.

The Army itself is doing a mammoth job. It has hacked out of the jungle on the Pacific side both Howard Field and adjoining Fort Kobbe which, when completed, will correspond in size to highly industrialized towns of 10,000 population.

On the Atlantic side, Fort Gulick is nearing completion. Camp Paraiso is building on the site of an old construction town.

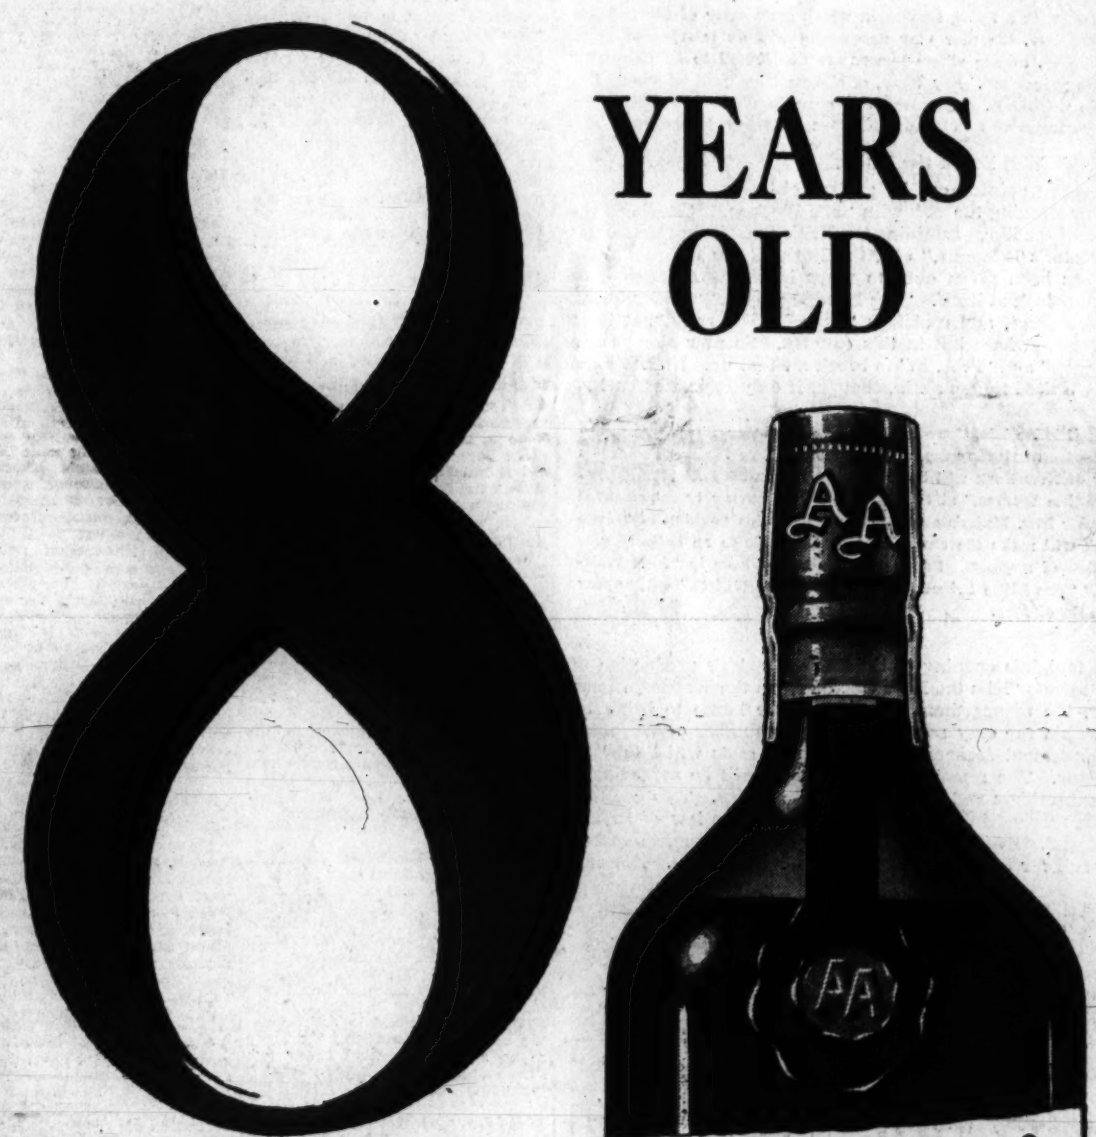

In addition, seven existing Army posts have been expanded. New barracks accommodating upwards of 200 men each are mushrooming at Fort Clayton, Fort Sherman, Albrook Field and other points.

There are new hospitals, bakeries, warehouses, laundries, chapels, theaters, guardhouses and USO buildings.

Civilian employment on the many and varied Canal Zone projects has reached 68,000 and is rising. Unskilled laborers are being imported. It all adds up to the biggest era of prosperity since the days that other Roosevelt-made—a reality of the long-dreamed Panama Canal.

On Mature Deliberation, The Fellow's Not Half Bad

Victor Is Victorious in His Latest Role;
"Little Women" Here for Saturday's Children;
Items of News and Gossip About the Theater

ANY LAD with nicely chiseled features, a mop of black hair—or dark brown—heavy eyebrows that can be made to beetle belligerently and a Weissmuller, or maybe Buster Crabbe, body, who decides to become an actor, especially screen, is letting himself in for something. A lot of playful publicists will "build him up" as a "glamour boy," certain segments of the scavenger press, in due course, will have him swishing around with his hands on his hips and eventually his studio will tackle the multiplied job of trying to undo it all.

It happened to Robert Taylor, it happened to Tyrone Power and it happened to Victor Mature, whose major celebrity, to date, has been based on somebody's delicate descriptive of "hunk of man." Just why this should be has never been quite clear to this department. It has always seemed to us that the boys have betrayed as much latent aptitude for histrionics as for collar ads and hair-grease testimonials. Taylor and Power have pretty well demonstrated it by now, without seriously crowding the Booth and Barrett niche, and this Mature hunk of man seems in a fair way of getting himself up there, with half a chance.

And what brought all this on? Nothing more important than yesterday's "holiday" preview screening of "Hot Spot," the Twentieth Century-Fox whodunit, in which Mature is co-starred with Betty Grable and Carole Landis, with Laird Cregar practically stealing the picture every time he maneuvers his 300 pounds or so in front of the camera. But the point is that Mr. Mature is in there pitching practically all the time and at least cutting the corners when he isn't blazing his fast ones right across the middle. The fellow is all right. So is the picture. You'll find out when it opens at the Capitol on Thursday.

So, directly "The Rivals" is out of the way—if it ever can be said to have been in the way—the National will be getting another metropolitan premiere, "prior to New York." This would be Robert Milton's production of his self-directed "R. A. F.," about you know what, which Phil Stevenson, avant courier, was telling the drama desks yesterday will be on E Street the week of November 24. Dealing, as it does, with a flying service in which a majority of the recruits are youngsters, the new play necessarily will be interpreted by a youthful cast, among whom honors are distributed in an unusually equitable proportion. Fay Ray, of cinema fame, will be among the feminine principals. The piece will come to Washington after two tryout performances in Wilmington the Saturday preceding.

The British Will Break the String
It is being pointed out by sapient observers of the theater that after winning the war with "The Wokey," "Candle in the Wind" and the like, examining the British medical profession in "The Doctor's Dilemma," etc., the National for the past three weeks has been given over to plays in which America once more dares look at itself. "The Land Is Bright," "Junior Miss," in lesser degree, and certainly "Papa Is All" could not have been laid anywhere but in this country. So now along come "The Rivals" and "R. A. F." to break all that up. Nice to have seen the United States again, though, if only for a moment!

Before it is too late, there ought to be a reminder along here somewhere that on Saturday morning Mrs. Clara Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York will be presenting Louisa May Alcott's old reliable "Little Women," at the National. Not having been presented here under Mrs. Major's auspices since 1931, this book of "Little Women" will make the charming play available to an entirely new generation of moppets. Fyrene Hampden, seen here in "Dick Whittington," "The Little Princess" and "The Seven Wishes," will appear in the role of Meg.

With tonight's opening of the Civic Theater's production of Clara Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," in the Wardman Park Theater, the management is recalling the house to bring its plays within the easy reach of a greater number of Washington's amusement-seekers. More than 200 seats will be priced at 50 cents. The remainder of the house will be apportioned to the subscribers and $1.50 and $1 admissions. This decision has been reached in strict conformity with the law of supply and demand. Ever since the opening of the season, there has been a call for 50-cent seats far beyond the supply. Not any more.

Wonderful-Intricate-That-Lingo-Ain't? Note
If your best friend comes to you spouting a quaintly twisted jargon, he has seen "Papa Is All." Everybody should, for a lesson in the humorous flexibility of the English tongue and a demonstration of the rigidity of his own.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Valley Grows Greener

Hollywood, Nov. 11 (INS).—Just heard that Richard Llewellyn, now in England, has consented to write a sequel to "How Green Was My Valley" for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Zanuck told me that the sequel will be called "Men of the Valley" and will take up where the original novel left off. For instance, we never know whether the miner, played by Walter Pidgeon, marries Maureen O'Hara, the daughter; what happened to Roddy McDowall after he grows up and how Sara Allgood, the mother, lives after Donald Crisp, the father, dies.

I am always amazed at Dick English, who is one of the world's most prolific writers. I just read a story he wrote for Cosmopolitan and I am always reading something in Colliers.

Touches Heights of Stardom

who leaped from obscurity to fame in Alfred Hitchcock's production of "Rebecca," now ranks as one of Hollywood's most intelligent and loveliest stars. Appearing again under Hitchcock's direction, she will be seen next as costar with Cary Grant in RKO-Radio's "Suspicion," coming soon to the screen at Keith's Theater.

Star Revival of 'The Rivals' Highlights New Theater Week

"THE RIVALS." Mary Boland, Bobby Clark and Walter Hampden follow precedents set by many of the theater's great when they join forces to costar in this revival of the Richard Brinsley Sheridan comedy opening a week's engagement at the National Monday evening. Others in the ambitious cast lined up by the Theater Guild for its third subscription play this season include Helen Ford, Donald Burr, Halla Stoddard, Philip Bourne, Robert Wallsten, Horace Sinclair and Raymond Johnson. Eva Le Gallienne directed. Matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

Palace
"NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH." Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard follow their success in "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers" with this new screen treatment of the popular comedy about the chap who bet he could tell nothing but the truth for 24 hours. Edward Arnold, Lefty Erikson, Glenn Anders, Helen Vinson, Grant Mitchell and Willie Best are among the featured players. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle
"INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON." The colorful branch of the R. A. F. is dramatized in this new Warner Brothers release with Ronald Reagan, James Stephenson, Olympe Bradu, William Lundigan, Joan Perry, Reginald Denny and Cliff Edwards in the leading roles. Regan plays the American test pilot who joins the squadron as a lark. Leading performers in the stage revue will include Willy Brown, Annette Ames, Stuart and Lea, the Cantrells, Lester Omen and new routines from the Roxettes. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol
"HOT SPOT." Victor Mature, Betty Grable and Carole Landis have the leading parts in this film mystery, adapted from the book "I Wake Up Screaming." The stage version will feature a miniature version of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," with Lynn Allison heading a company of 70 singers in the melodious operetta. In addition to the abbreviated musical, the stage revue also will present comic Joe Frisco and the Bricklayers. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's
"IT STARTED WITH EVE." The Deanna Durbin-Charles Laughton comedy continues for a second week at the Fifteenth Street house. With Robert Cummings as the young man, the story concerns a vigorous father's efforts to marry his son to a lively girl. There's also an "Information Please" with Boris Karloff.

Metropolitan

Columbia
"HONKY TONK." The Clark Gable-Jean Arthur "western" will begin its fifth week on F Street tomorrow, continuing at the Columbia after a three-week run at the Earle.

Madame President Takes Over

Hollywood, Nov. 11. Congratulations to the Motion Picture Academy for having vision enough to elect Bette Davis, president. If any woman here deserves that job, it's Bette. And while Walter Wanger served not only wisely but well, I've always felt an actor or actress should be president. The Academy was formed originally by Doug Fairbanks for actors.

Incidentally, Bette's little blonde protegee, Glenn Graham, who got her training on the stage with Walter Hampden, will soon star a picture for Joe Brown, at RKO. Both Spencer Tracy and Gary Cooper are being considered for the life of Will Rogers.

Has Mrs. Jack Oakie gone domestic since they've moved out to the valley? When her house is finished, it's going to be something to behold. . . . Lili Damita won't leave for New York with her baby for at least a month, when she's completed her Red Cross training.

There's no truth to that report that Director Wesley Ruggles is trying to get the custody of his son Wesley. Arline Judge has complete charge of the boy and they're devoted to each other. Incidentally, no one in this town is working harder for a picture career than Arline. And she'll get it, too, 'cause she's clever and cute as a bug's ear.

Roddy McDowell's father, who's over there, read an item about the flu epidemic in Hollywood, became quite perturbed about it, and wrote suggesting Roddy might be better off back in London where the climate is healthier!

Rosemary Lane's met more celebrities since her hit than she met during her whole stay in Hollywood. Her callers back stage have included Walt Disney, Bob Benchley, Joan Crawford, Dick Powell and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Janet Beecher's arrived from New York on the crest of the wave. She turned down a play back there to do "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat" for Norman Taurog.

Now that Walter Wagner's not producing, there's one of the best public relations men in town out of a job. I'll bet he won't be out long. He's LaRoy Johnson, whose campaign on "Sun-down" and Gene Tierney was terrific. He only got two seven-magazine stories. Remember what he did for Ann Sheridan in "Winter Carnival," and Neddy Lamarr in "Algebra"?

In a note from Writer Tom Geraghty, he tells me that his London home, where I had tea with him one day in Park Crescent, Regent's Park, was completely demolished by a bomb which hit only one house—his. It was thought the Jerries were trying to hit the B. B. C. building just around the corner.

Roddy McDowell's father, who's over there, read an item about the flu epidemic in Hollywood, became quite perturbed about it, and wrote suggesting Roddy might be better off back in London where the climate is healthier!

Myrna Loy's Smile Will Cheer Pilots

Myrna Loy's famous smile will cheer British army pilots as they ferry bombers across the Atlantic, and probably in aerial combat, as the result of honors accorded the screen star.

On the set of "Shadow of the Thin Man" in which she co-stars with William Powell, Miss Loy received notification from Flying Officer C. T. Kimber, Royal Air Force, Port Albert, Ontario, that she has been named as mascot of the squadron. Kimber, a veteran of numerous aerial duels, has flown over Germany 40 times, and was decorated by his government for valor in action. He requested portraits of Miss Loy, with autographs, which will be carried on the trans-Atlantic bombers ferried by members of the squadron.

LEONARD LYONS Pulls Sunday Punch!

New York, Nov. 11. When Maxim Litvinoff arrives in Washington to assume his new post as Soviet Ambassador one of the first questions the correspondents will ask him will be the one concerning freedom of religion in Russia. Once before, in Washington, Litvinoff was asked that question. . . . In 1933, when he came here to arrange for American recognition of his country, he left the White House after a conference with the President and faced an array of reporters. "Did you discuss with the President the question of religious freedom in Russia?" Litvinoff was asked. . . . "I cannot answer that, gentlemen," he replied. . . . "because today is Sunday."

MICHAEL ARLEN

Michael Arlen, the British novelist, this week was asked why he hasn't written any stories in the past few years. "There are more important things to do, in these critical times," he replied. . . . Then the name of another British writer, suspected of Fascist sympathies, was mentioned. He has written some recent best-sellers. "He seems to be doing all the writing for England now," Arlen was told. "But I guess that isn't quite as dangerous as letting F. G. Wedecouse do it" . . . "You're wrong. It's more dangerous," Arlen answered. "Wedecouse is in Berlin."

In London last week, some members of a Roosevelt mission conferred with English officials. A note was brought to two of the Britishers—who left, saying: "We'll be back shortly" . . . Those men are Britain's foremost mathematicians. They were rushed, by air to Dover—where three men, watching a Rugby game, had been killed by a Nazi shell fired across the Channel. The mathematicians studied the shell's trajectory—arrived at by measuring the angle of the snapped branches in the trees through which the shell had traveled. They made their calculations and located the exact spot in France from which the shell had been fired. An R. A. F. plane went up and across and destroyed the gun. The mathematicians flew back to the London meeting. "Sorry, gentlemen," they apologized to the Americans, "we had a bit of figuring to do."

Last Wednesday night, in Reuben's, a lady shrieked that she had lost a diamond bracelet which cost $3500. While she was lamenting, the uniformed doorman, Bill Fason, brought the bracelet inside. . . . Whenever a taxi discharges a passenger at Reuben's, Fason always looks inside that cab—to make sure that no handbag or package had been left there. That's how he found the bracelet. . . . "Thank you, thank you," the grateful lady told him. She gave him a coin—50c. . . . "Well, Bill," the doorman was asked later, "do you still think it pays to be honest?" . . . "Yeah," he declared. "That's why I been able to hold onto this job for 24 years."

Bundles for Britain will be the beneficiary of Mrs. Renge Macredy's "Market of the Americas," at 484 Park, which Eleanor Roosevelt will open. Mrs. W. Somerset Maugham recently spent a month in Mexico, shopping for the merchandise which will be sold at the market. It will feature a "Time Schedule for Xmas shoppers." The schedule allots: "If Married shopping for Wife's Present—14 minutes. If Unmarried, Shopping for Best Girl's Present—16 minutes." In other words, Get Married and Save Two Minutes. . . . Carson Kania, the movie director, has been notified from the United States Army to the Film Division of O.E.M. . . . Princess Martha, of Norway purchased a coat from Louis Ritter, the furrier. She invited him to visit her at the Palace in Oslo, after the war. "By that time you'll forget," Ritter suggested. "No, I won't," said Princess Martha, and presented him with a binder—her personal card good for one visit with the Royal Family in Oslo.

Lepke Buchalter, now being tried for murder in Kings County, knows exactly what his chances are. Lepke, who helped select the jury trying him, is familiar with the statutes and the rules of evidence. And one of his regrets is that he never had learned about a man named Ponzi—the notorious embezzler who went to jail when his million-dollar bubble burst. . . . After Lepke surrendered to and was convicted by the Federal officials he fought against interrupting his Federal prison term by standing trial in the State criminal courts. En route to the courthouse, Lepke was told: "Ponzi vs. Fessenden will give us trouble." . . . "Never heard of those men," said Lepke. . . . The Ponzi case decided that the Attorney General may, at his discretion, order a Federal prisoner turned over to a State court for trial. And Attorney General Murphy, about to go to the Supreme Court, delivered up Lepke. . . . "If I had known about Ponzi," sighed Lepke, "I never'd have surrendered."

U. S. Says Price Rises Exceed Pay Increases

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department warned yesterday that price rises are beginning to outrun increased national income so that many workers are no better off than before they made more money.

Observing that the national income reached in September a rate equivalent to 92 billion dollars a year—the highest rate in history and ten billion dollars more than the actual 1940 figure—the Department added, nevertheless that "the gains in income payments for August and September were approximately offset by rising prices . . . and the real volume of non-agricultural income showed a marked decline."

This meant, for instance, that a man making $40 a week might not be able to buy as much with his wages as he was able to buy several months ago with a smaller pay check because prices of merchandise increased faster than his wage rate.

September income payments—the estimated total of all money paid for wages, dividends, net rents, interest, relief and individual business profits—totalled $8,099,000,000, compared with $7,270,000,000 in August and $6,574,000,000 in September of last year.

Income payments in the first nine months of the year aggregated $54,332,000,000, or 17 per cent more than in the similar period last year. In these periods wage payments were up 21 per cent, individual business and farm profits increased 14 per cent, and dividends gained 10 per cent.

Meanwhile, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said yesterday that voluntary agreements stabilizing prices of furniture upholstery fabrics had been superseded by a price schedule providing that maximums for any present pattern shall be 5 per cent more than the quoted price on September 10.

This schedule will be followed shortly by establishment of ceilings at present levels on the prices of wood furniture, Henderson said. Prices of furniture upholstery fabrics showed an average increase of 24 per cent during the first 10 months of 1941.

Flue Bad, Smoke Fills White House

Waltman May Quit GOP Job; Irked by Foreign Policy Fight

Franklyn Waltman, jr., is ready to resign as publicity director of the Republican National Committee because he believes Republicans as

Waltman, former political columnist for The Washington Post, left The Post in April, 1938, to direct effective Republican publicity in the 1938 Congressional and the 1940 Presidential campaigns.

He is expected to tender his resignation to Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, in the next few days, and return to newspaper work.

Disappointed in G. O. P.

Friends said last night that Waltman believes that now badly divided members of the party overlooked an opportunity to play a constructive role in domestic policies and should never have made foreign policy in the present emergency a subject for partisan dispute.

By not concentrating on what he regards as obvious flaws in the Administration's labor policies and neglecting to build up aggressive issues on important domestic questions of price control and fiscal policy, they said he believed Republicans have become a party of negation that cannot possibly expect to come back in the next election.

While Waltman was reported strongly sympathetic with Wendell L. Willkie's aggressive support of the President's foreign course, it was said that personalities were not involved in the coming break and there have been no personal differences with Chairman Martin.

Crushing Defeat Seen

The current Republican split over foreign policy in Congress can in his opinion end only in crushing Republican confessions or in a crushing defeat at the polls, these friends said.

As an example of what he regards as domestic policy opportunities overlooked, they cited defense program holdups by labor strikes and refusal of House Republicans to solidly support such corrective legislation as has been advanced, notably the Vinson "cooling-off" bill. He is said to feel strongly that Republicans neglected a constructive opportunity as well in formula-

MOST EVERYONE knows Hydra-Matic Drive* is a work saver. But few realize that it's a gas saver, too. Here are the facts: Hydra-Matic is engineered with four speeds forward. That permits slower engine speeds. In fourth, or cruising speed, for example, 1,000 engine revolutions will propel your Olds Hydra-Matic 2,130 feet as against 1,700 feet for a similar car with standard transmission. Hence, you get more mileage on gas—or, conversely, save gas on any given trip. Then, too, Hydra-Matic's automatic shifting prevents lags between shifts, and consequent waste of fuel. The net result—gasoline savings of 10 to 15 per cent, according to engineering tests and owners' reports. Why not drive the easy Hydra-Matic way—in a new Olds B-44—and be money ahead on gas!

Veterans Observe Armistice Day at Memorials

Before memorials dedicated to those who fell in "the war to end wars," Americans yesterday were called upon to stand ready for United States entrance into another world conflict, this time to smash "the greatest peril in history."

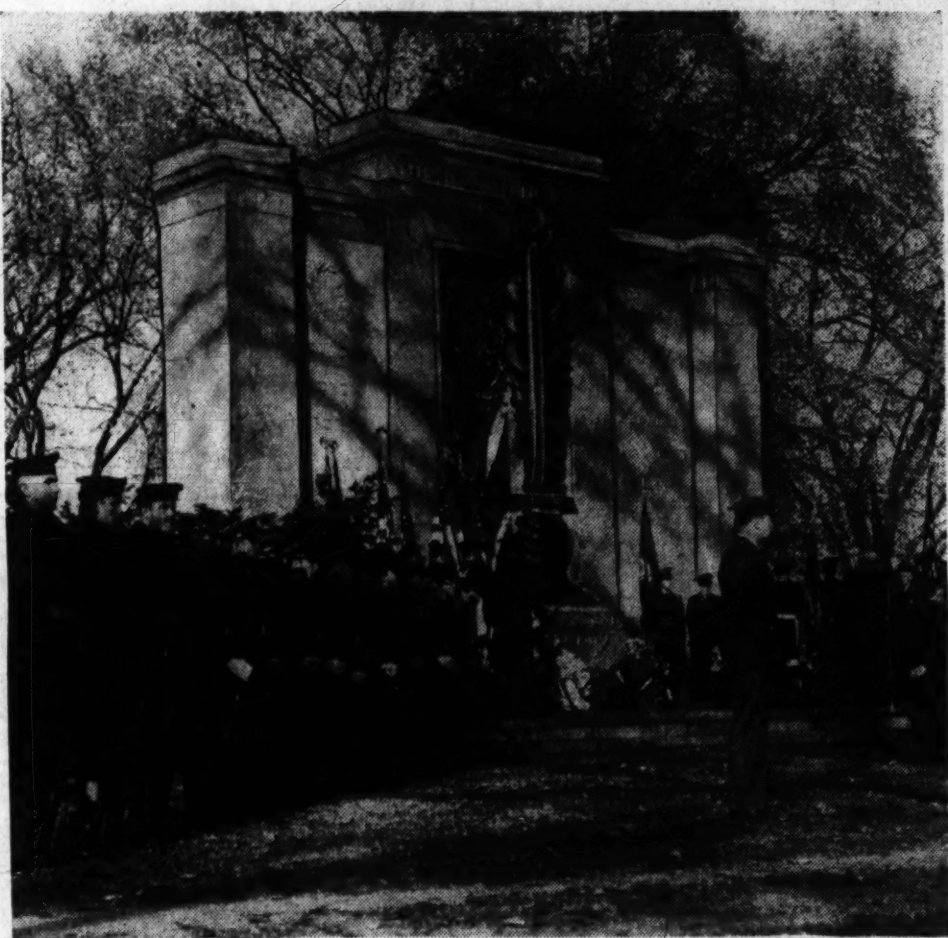

In colorful Armistice Day ceremonies at the Second Division monument on Constitution Avenue, 400 civilians and Army, Marine and Navy details heard white-thatched Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma warn solemnly, "We may be entering World War number two."

"We want the world to know," Thomas proclaimed, "that we propose to protest and defend the dignity and honor of the Stars and Stripes upon land and sea. To do less would be treason to the memory of our countless dead who died that Americans might be free."

Thomas accused the German war machine of attempting to conquer and rule the world.

"Today," he said, "out-law nations with no regard for their promises and pledges have already overrun and destroyed peoples and nations until most of Europe, Asia and Africa lie prostrate and helpless at their bloody feet."

"In the new world order planned by Germany the German race is to rule and to live off the slave labors of the conquered peoples inhabiting the continents as

"If Hitler wins there will be no armistice, no terms and no treaty of peace."

The Oklahoma Senator's speech was the highlight of colorful ceremonies in which several wreaths were laid before the torch-holding hand which themes the monument, while details of the Army, Navy and Marines and uniformed American Legionnaires presented arms.

The United States Marine Band played. Frank Griffin, president of the District of Columbia branch of the Second Division Association spoke briefly. Miss Helene Gilliard, soprano, sang.

A little later, at the white-columned District of Columbia World War Memorial in West Potomac Park, the Twenty-ninth Division Association held services and heard Milton E. Groome, national commander of the association, tell of possible dark days ahead.

"Sacrifices are being made," he declared, "and you will be called no doubt to make sacrifices even greater in order to preserve our freedom, our way of life."

Groome took a rapid poke at the isolationist group—averring that "sparks from this colossal conflagration now in the world will grow into a flame that will quell even the most enthusiastic of the headline-seeking isolationists."

Frank B. Noyes, chairman of the 1931 District World War Memorial committee, spoke briefly. The Elks Boys' Band played.

War May Be Forced on U.S., Welles Warns

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

America, on the brink of war as it enters the "valley of decision," may now realize that the ideals of Woodrow Wilson have been vindicated, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said yesterday at the tomb of the World War President.

"A cycle in human events is about to come to its end," he asserted in measured tones at the annual Armistice Day memorial service in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral.

Facing 500 reverent pilgrims to the Wilson shrine, including the widow of the Chief Executive, Welles' delivery was slow and calm but the words were strong as he described the "raucous voice of a criminal paranoiac" as one which might never have arisen if Wilson's principles had been followed.

"How rarely in human history has the vision of a statesman been so tragically and so swiftly vindicated," he said.

"Beyond the Atlantic a sinister and pitiless conqueror has reduced more than half of Europe to abject serfdom. It is his boast that his system shall prevail even unto the ends of the earth."

"In the Far East the same forces of conquest under a different guise are menacing the safety of all nations that border upon the Pacific."

War, said Welles, "may be forced upon us," at any time.

"Would the burdens and the dangers, which the American people might have to envisage through that 'partnership of democratic nations' which Woodrow Wilson then urged upon them, have represented even an infinitesimal portion of the burdens and the dangers with which they are now concerned?" he asked.

The speaker recalled the "practical, hard-headed Americans" who jeered at Wilson's idealism "who refused to admit that our security could be even remotely jeopardized if the whole of the rest of the earth was plunged into the chaos of world anarchy."

"The American people," Welles declared, "after full debate, in accordance with their democratic institutions, have determined upon their policy. They are pledged to defend their freedom and their ancient rights against every form of aggression, and to spare no effort and no sacrifice in bringing to pass the final defeat of Hitlerism and all that which that evil term implies."

When the time comes for Americans to make "that great decision," they will turn "for light and for inspiration to the ideals of that great seer, statesman, Wilson—whose memory we here today revere," Welles said.

"Then, again, they will remember that great cause he once held up before their eyes: 'A universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free.'

The Rev. Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips, dean-elect of Washington Cathedral, officiated at the 30-minute service, sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson Armistice Day Committee.

Among those in the procession were officers of George Washington Post, American Legion, of which Wilson was a member; William Ross, grandson of Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Bureau of the Mint, and the full choir, directed by Paul Callaway.

Following the ceremony and address, a wreath was placed on the tomb by the Disabled Americans of the World War. In his address, National Commander Maj. Laurence R. Melton paid particular tribute to World War nurses.

Why We Fought

Time and Mr. Hitler have amply justified our entry into World War I. And it seems incredible in retrospect that, as the President said at Arlington yesterday, "a few years ago, even a few months ago, we questioned, some of us, the sacrifice" of our war dead. Yet the questioning was so rampant that there is no other explanation for the foolish statute known as the Neutrality Act. After the war we allowed ourselves as a Nation to wallow in disillusionment over our war participation. We lent ready ears to the facile charge which came out of the Nye Committee and a battery of debunking publicists that Wall Street bankers had led the Nation by the nose into war. Newton D. Baker, almost alone among the men in charge of our World War I effort, took sharp issue with that thesis. Perhaps he was stung into rebuttal by the defamation of Mr. Wilson's character which disfigured the literary labors of the debunkers. The President, in last year's Armistice Day ceremonies, dubbed these folk "unpatriotic." This year he took a wholly positive line and declared that our war dead fought to make the world safe—not safe for this or that, but safe. There is no longer any need to labor the point. The sacrifice of our war dead has been triumphantly justified. It was an expression of that eternal vigilance which is demanded of all freemen as the price for retaining their liberties against the periodic eruption of tyranny.

But the day of commemoration for the war dead requires of the living much more than a vindication of sacrifice. Upon the living is imposed a duty to keep the peace which the dead won. They sought peace, and we must insure it. Surely there is no other way of achieving that object than to accept the responsibility which the dead committed to the living and to collaborate with other like-minded nations in establishing a world order. The tragedy of our disillusionment with our participation in World War I was that the disillusionment expressed itself in a national denial of responsibility for a world order. The denial has proved to be a boomerang. Events have blown down our insulation, and the decision to collaborate with the warmakers against the force that threatens our free world has already been taken informally. By the same token we are in what Sumner Welles, speaking at the tomb of President Wilson, calls the Valley of Decision on our attitude toward the peace. Mr. Welles questions, as do most thoughtful Americans, whether the world would have come to its present pass if we had accepted the responsibilities which President Wilson assumed in our behalf. Out of the graves before which our people stood yesterday there comes a reminder of a duty denied. The sacrifice of the war dead and the aspirations of the living would be, as Mr. Welles put it, "defrauded" if the United States did not take its part—a leading part in view of our power—in the next effort to reestablish a world community.

Navy Takes A Stand

The Navy's forceful action to break the outlaw strike at San Diego comes like a ray of sunshine into a confused and murky situation. Stubborn union leaders, in the language of Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakely, had gone to the extreme of "open revolt against the United States." That left the Navy no alternative to the use of protective force to break the outlaw strike. Fortunately it has faced the issue squarely and is using its "full constituted authority to suppress the revolt."

It is not a pleasant task for the Government to break a strike. The Administration has been scrupulous in protecting all the rights of labor. Indeed, it has gone so far in giving labor the benefit of the doubt that our defense program has been weakened in many instances. Instead of appreciating that leniency, some irresponsible unions have attempted to defy the Government itself in violation of agreements into which their representatives have entered. In such instances they must discover that the Government has a power as well as a friendly hand which may be used on appropriate occasions.

The construction workers who went on strike in San Diego, holding up 11 defense projects, blandly ignored the no-strike agreement of their parent organization with the OPM. They refused to arbitrate the dispute. By their own conduct they thus forfeited the right to further consideration as a responsible collective bargaining unit. Now there can be only one satisfactory ending to the episode. The Navy has taken the only reasonable course open to it, and the workers should frankly acknowledge their mistake, forget the past and go back to work. The national safety demands an end of outlaw strikes of this character and workers should be the first to see that the Government cannot tolerate such revolts in the future.

Word To The House

Events move so swiftly that a new setting for our national defense problem comes almost every week. Thus the House of Representatives will find today a new setting for its consideration of the Neutrality Act. A month ago the House voted to revise the act only for the purpose of protecting our seamen. Specifically the members permitted the President to arm our merchant vessels. But our situation then was not so tense as it has since developed. It became so tense that the Senate, instead of following the House example, decided that our national interests as well as our seamen required protection. Accordingly the Senators voted to free our shipping for service everywhere. This is the additional protection which the House is now asked to permit, and it will meet to consider the project in the same setting which influenced the Senate.

The change in setting has occurred mainly as a result of Hitler's pressure on Japan. Hitler is demanding of Japan acceptance of the Nazi contention that the undeclared war in the Atlantic which Hitler has forced upon the United States is proof of American aggression! There is nothing academic in that demand. For the demand, if accepted in Japan, would require the Japanese to declare war on the United States. This is the obligation which the Japanese undertook when they joined the Germans and the Italians in the so-called Axis alliance. Now the Japanese, according to all accounts, don't want war with the United States. But they are responding to Nazi pressure (as well as the exigencies of their own internal situation) by bringing pressure upon the United States. That is the meaning of the Kurusu mission to the United States.

The spectacle could not possibly take place but for the persistent feeling among the Axis powers that the United States is too confused to resist intimidation. Hitler told Hermann Rausing that we are in our "last disgusting death rattle." He guaranteed that "at the right moment a new America will arise as our strongest supporter when we are ready to take the stride into overseas space." Our behavior in recent months, certainly, gives plausible justification for Hitler's confidence. Industrial strife has introduced an uncertain element into our industrial defense. Political division has weakened our diplomacy. No doubt Hitler has made the most of these and other factors in our domestic situation in his pressure upon Japan to take—at our expense—a simultaneous leap into overseas space along with Hitler.

This threat to our Nation from the east and the west is accompanied by Nazi and Japanese activities on our southern frontier aimed equally at our national interests. The realization should put a spur into our heads that the Atlantic is not a gulf, but a highway; the hemisphere not a separate entity, but part of the world. If we look at a globe instead of separate maps, we shall see at once that all the important places of Latin America are much closer to Europe and Africa than to North America. They are so close that Hitlerism is already flourishing beneath the surface of South American life. This newspaper has just published a series of articles by Joseph Driscoll on those activities. They should be set against Hitler's Sunday speech denying any aspirations in South America. The fact is that prior to the recent coup d'etat in Panama Arnulfo Arias as President was actually scheming to become gauleiter of all Central America in the event of a Nazi victory. This and other signs prove that the day that Hitler becomes master of Europe and the Atlantic Ocean, the United States will not have an ounce of prestige in Latin America. As Count Sforza says, "It would be better to go there with a Portuguese or Bulgarian passport than with a Washington passport."

This is the setting for the vote in the House. War in two oceans, certainly, is something that we should try to avoid. But we have got to treat the encircling menace as one because our enemies are in alliance. What we can do by way of avoiding a two-ocean war is to buttress our diplomacy in the Pacific that the Japanese will quail before our national front. The House can give the model for that unity. If the vote were to take the form of a demonstration, then our enemies would be faced with the old American warning, "Don't Tread On Me!"—a warning which is far more effective in a tyrant-threatened world than irresolution.

Union Shop

How carefully and conscientiously the National Defense Mediation Board considered the John L. Lewis demand for a union shop in the captive mines is apparent in every line of the majority report. The report is signed by 9 out of the 11 members of the board. It rejects the Lewis demand for a change in a status quo which has worked satisfactorily for two years. But in the process the report recites at length the arguments pro and con and gives a long statement of the reasons back of its conclusion. Those reasons are squarely based upon the larger interests of labor unionism in general and the U. M. W. in particular.

It is coming to be appreciated that an industry-wide contract is the best means of stabilizing labor conditions. The majority subscribe to that theory. But in the present dispute the board was faced with a fact, not a theory. It could not overlook the stubbornness of the captive mine operators against any extension to their mines of an industry-wide agreement. Nor in this democratic country could the board ignore the fact that 5 per cent of the miners in the captive mines so far have resisted the efforts of Mr. Lewis to unionize them. The majority in this respect leaned to the extreme of fairness in putting a case for unionization before the nonunion miners. Beyond that it could not go.

In these circumstances it is absurd for the minority to argue that under this decision "labor unions are denied the right of normal growth and legitimate aspirations." British unionism did not grow in the forcing house of exclusive jurisdiction. It thrived on the healthy democratic principle that workers have a right to choose their own unions. This, indeed, is the principle underlying that "charter of American labor" known as the Wagner Act, which substitutes for the principle of exclusive jurisdiction the libertarian principle of letting the workers in bargaining units decide for themselves by what organization, if any, they wish to be represented. If American labor is to live in peace under the Wagner Act, it must be based upon that kind of tolerance.

The facts controvert the further statement of the minority that the decision will "disrupt peaceful industrial relations established in other industries where a union shop relationship has already been established." The contrary is true. If the board had accepted the Lewis demand, labor leaders throughout the country would have felt compelled—if not impelled by their membership—to demand the union shop. The board is not against the union shop as such. It is against forcing the union shop down the throats of industrial operators and dissident operatives against their wishes, though it makes an exception for special cases, such as the case where a denial of the union shop would threaten a union's existence. No such exception, of course, can be adduced in the case of Mr. Lewis' powerful and well-entrenched union.

That the arguments of either Mr. Lewis or his colleagues on the board were unconvincing is indicated in the 9-to-2 decision against the U. M. W. They were unable to carry conviction to any one member of the group on the board representing the public interest or the employer group of four or even one of the two members of the American Federation of Labor. The vote against the Lewis demand was really unanimous, since the two dissidents are themselves executive officials of Mr. Lewis' union. For this reason, if for no other, the decision will command the support, we believe, of the American people. This is the significant factor for Mr. Lewis to ponder. The American people are rapidly losing patience over an epidemic of strikes which are holding up the defense effort to which the United States is now dedicated. There is another reason for their impatience. Such strikes as Mr. Lewis called are based on issues which have nothing to do with the material welfare of labor nor that union security has been established.

LONE DRAKE

Three days I have seen him alone
On the pasture pond at dawn,
And the scattered flocks have flown
But the drake stays on.

I cannot remember the sound
Of a shot in the pasture here—
There was shooting all around
Again this year!

He is not wounded, I know—
I have seen him trace and retrace
The sky . . . as if below
He had marked a place.

Cold is the wind through the reeds
And the sky is cold and gray.
What can there be that he needs?
Why must he stay?

He turns to gaze at the sky,
Watching still for his mate
And listening for her cry.
Though the bow grows late.

Employee Transfers

I agree with Logicus that in the merit system, Government chiefs and supervisors are the ones who need rating. From my experience of 15 years in Government offices I know that a mythical Uncle Sam, "impartial as the sun," is not at the helm with justice toward employees. Indeed, he can not be, what with the bottleneck chiefs and supervisors who make it impossible for fitness for a position, or longevity in office to count in one's favor. The new old lady supervisor who late in life got in through pull (and doles out work, with explanations of how to do it, ready been established.) The contrary is true. If the board had accepted the Lewis demand, labor leaders throughout the country would have felt compelled—if not impelled by their membership—to demand the union shop. The board is not against the union shop as such. It is against forcing the union shop down the throats of industrial operators and dissident operatives against their wishes, though it makes an exception for special cases, such as the case where a denial of the union shop would threaten a union's existence. No such exception, of course, can be adduced in the case of Mr. Lewis' powerful and well-entrenched union.

How are some to find their niche, since civil service freely allows "supervisors" to quicken whom they will, and forbids employees to transfer to a suitable environment where they would also be worth more to Uncle Sam? To keep employees year after year in an environment that is obnoxious and in work unsuited to their talents means a loss to Uncle Sam as well. It seems incredible that there has not been a law before this that would, after a certain number of years, allow an employee to seek his rightful niche without being penalized by having to start at the bottom again.

Too, since one is compelled to stay in one department for years, unfavorable legends are attached to an employee in the minds of new employees and supervisors, perpetuated by the old.

Although I fail to see what the War of 1812 has to do with our aid to Britain in the present crisis, I should like to add a few comments to those of Mr. Walter H. Zeydel on this historic subject.

Whatever our quarrel in 1812, Britain had her grievances, as we now admit. Her sailors on reaching an American port would jump ship and become a full-fledged U. S. citizen, accomplishing in an hour what now takes years. It was not a sudden conversion to democracy, but better wages that lay behind this dishonest practice. England then stopped our ships and searched them for her sailors who had violated their articles in deserting their ship.

The cry of despotism started a wave of war fever, which was raging at its height in the frontier countries like Kentucky when a peaceable agreement was reached with England. But the fever had got beyond control, as it had turned from freedom of the seas to the forcible annexation of Canada. Our Army invaded what was then known as Upper Canada and burned the capital of York (the modern Toronto), in return for which a handful of redcoat raiders burned the Capitol and White House in Washington. Incidentally our volunteers made a sorry showing (read the Unpopular History of the United States), except for the single victory of New Orleans, fought after peace had already been signed. Those were the days of sail and horse communications. Our Navy alone made good.

The War of 1812 bears no more relation to our aid to Britain today than does our Mexican War of 1846 to our present good-neighbor policy with Mexico. Today the United States and Mexico and all free people are striving to stay the bloody hand of the mad paperhanger, Hitler.

Youth Needs Ideals

I would like to speak for the younger generation, for the young men and women of today who do not remember the first World War, but who have seen the results in the high hopes of peace, the disillusionment following these high hopes, the economic chaos and the growing nationalism that had their roots in that conflict.

We grew up in a period when pacifism was taught us in our homes and our schools, but today we are blamed by our elders for not wholeheartedly cooperating in the defense effort of our country. We have seen that the hopes of those who fought in the first World War were futile and yet today we are asked to make similar sacrifices. There are young men in today's Army who begrudge every moment spent serving their country. I think that the reason for this attitude on the part of young people is that we have not left that we can wholeheartedly believe in.

If we could really believe that we might build a better world by giving our time, our labor, and even our lives to the cause, we would be willing to do it tomorrow. What we need is an ideal worth fighting for.

Professional Letter Writers

You receive letters from a number of people who are virtually professionals. Some of the familiar signatures have come to be like well-known and obnoxious acquaintances. Day after day the familiar names crop up in your letter column. Day after day they express the same "opinions." They hate Roosevelt. They hate Britain. Their walls of sympathy and their tears of human compassion are reserved exclusively for the victims of "British imperialism." They feel very deeply about the voteless East Indians (but never a word of sorrow for the butchered Poles, Dutch, French, Greeks, Jews et al. of Europe).

Lately these hard-working letter writers have discovered a violent new hate. "Godless Russia! Piety has come to them very swiftly. I have actually reviewed your files and studied some of the old epistles from these familiar names. And what do you think? Not one of these suddenly sanctimonious people was shocked or outraged by Soviet atheism so long as Stalin's inaction was aiding Hitler. Not one was concerned with the "menace of Communism" until Russia joined Britain and the United States in the struggle against fascism.

Curious, isn't it (is it?), how dependable and consistent these industrious little letter writers are!

Congressional Pay

In an article appearing in your publication of Friday, November 7, you advised that Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Democrat), New York, had introduced a bill to pay members on the basis of $25 for each day Congress is in session and quoted the member—"To set an example for the Nation" and take a reduction in pay.

Why does he not introduce a bill providing that members who do not live in Washington during the sessions or who do not attend the sessions shall have their monthly pay "docked"?

Look at some of the roll calls of the House and Senate. If the members absent were "docked," the roll calls would be much greater than those to be expected from Mr. Kennedy's political bill.

The Post Impressionist

From Buck Private To Bride

Deborah Gannett, nee Sampson, alias Robert Shurtliff, was the sort of woman who got around. According to her own statement, officially recorded, she served from April, 1918, to November, 1918, as a soldier in the American Revolution; was present at the capture of Cornwallis; was wounded at Tarboro; and, at the termination of her service received an honorable discharge.

Now before you say that she must have been a thwarted creature, incapable of feminine instincts, let me add that within six months after her discharge she bowed in conventional acknowledgment of her womanly destiny, becoming, on April 7, 1919, the bride of Benjamin Gannett, who is described as an upright and industrious man. To say nothing of Miss Sampson's military service in itself, I submit that for sheer versatility the fact of accomplishing a smooth transition from buck private to bride in less than six months establishes an unquestionable claim to distinction. Such a show of nonchalant taking big moments in stride would even do credit to our swift 1940s. And we're bound to concede that, whether by reason of greater personal daring or merely because of the simpler military organization of her time, the ungendered fact of her enlistment goes quite beyond present-day possibilities. Our comparatively elaborate processes of induction would immediately spell doom to such a mad undertaking, probably there'd be some very flashy publicity, and we'd be sorry we'd ever thought of such a thing. We'd better decide right now to confine our defense activities to knitting, sewing, blood donating, and various kinds of social service, at least until we are officially authorized to undertake more masculine pursuits. If this be a reversal of period types, ladies, make the most of it.

I do not mean to imply that Miss Sampson's enlistment was an entirely simple matter. On the contrary, it required extraordinary resourcefulness and daring, and it occasioned much emotional distress. But Deborah Sampson knew what she wanted, and she had what it took to overcome the obstacles of that time and attain her objective.

She was born December 17, 1760, at Plympton, Massachusetts. Her unfortunate financial circumstances she was separated from her mother when she was about five years old. She was adopted by a charitable maiden lady who died three years later. Little Deborah next lived with a family named Thatcher. After about two years with this family she went to live in the farm home of Deacon Jeremiah Thomas. Here, as she grew up, she learned to spin and weave, and time she did such manly chores as harnessing the horse and raking hay.

Her mother and her benefactors were sympathetically aware of her unusual native intelligence, but "sweetness of disposition." The opportunities afforded for her education were, however, inadequate for one of her capacity. She grew restless and longed to escape from the restricted limits of her environment, and as the Revolution proceeded on its bloody course she conceived the idea of enlisting as a soldier.

There were sleepless nights of planning, vexing questions as to how to acquire masculine clothing and a convincing masculine appearance, sharp emotional stabs at the thought of how her disappearance would affect her mother and her benefactors.

Her physical appearance seems to have favored her bizarre purpose to some extent; according to description she was "erect, a little taller than the average height of females."

By dint of patient planning and daring execution she accomplished the preliminary step of her purpose, the change in appearance from a young, robust country woman to an alert, war-conscious man, eager to enter the military service of his country. With deliberate disregard of the somewhat tangled details of the actual enlistment we skip now to the scene in which appears the dauntless Deborah Shurtliff, No. 40089, neatly clad in an Army uniform and marching with some 50 sturdy comrades to join a contingent of soldiers stationed at Fort Mifflin.

Even her exemplary service as a soldier in the general social organization of a war period did not entirely shield the young heroine from unkind criticism after her exploits became known. She admitted her enlistment to have been "an act of presumption," but said that she was motivated by patriotic principles. Both her State and national governments, however, expressed financial recognition of her services, and she received some fine verbal accolades from a patriotic Legislature should grant her 34 pounds. . . . the said Deborah exhibited an extraordinary instance of humane heroism by discharging her duties of a faithful, gallant soldier, and at the same time preserving the virtue and chastity of her sex unsuspected and unblemished, and was discharged from the service with a fair and honorable character.

In 1805 Mrs. Gannett was awarded a pension from the national Government, retroactive from January 1, 1800, which was continued throughout the remainder of her life and increased at various times. After her death, which occurred April 29, 1827, Benjamin Gannett as widower of an honorably discharged soldier petitioned Congress for the pension. In July, 1828, about a year and a half after Benjamin Gannett's death, Congress approved a special act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the heirs of Deborah Gannett $400.00, "being an equivalent for a full pension of $80 per annum from the fourth day of March, 1831, to the decease of Benjamin Gannett in January, 1827, as granted in certain cases to the widows of Revolutionary soldiers. . . . Thus were the provisions for widows' pensions adapted in effect to meet the claims of a then deceased widow. In the words of the act, "the pensioning the bill" . . . there cannot be a parallel case in all time to come. . . . FLORENCE JANSON.

Women in Last War Mark Armistice Day

By Lucia Giddens

A group of women who served overseas in the last war gathered for their annual Armistice Day reunion yesterday—and, amid reminiscences, heard echoes from the present conflict.

The Washington Unit of the Women's Overseas Service League at its breakfast at the Willard hotel listened to Miss Florence A. Stone's account of the war's outbreak in Greece. Having made her home in Greece in recent years, she told of her feelings at her parting sight of the Acropolis in July—with three banners flying, the blue and white flag of Greece, the Fascist flag and the swastika.

Miss Ruth Burnside, who recently returned from many years of social welfare work in Japan, also spoke briefly.

A message from Gen. John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War, expressing appreciation of the services of the league members, was read at the breakfast by Mrs. Virginia A. Nelson.

Among guests was Miss Margaret Menzel, who is on vacation from her clerical work with the United States Legation in Morocco. She was with the United States Embassy in Paris when the war broke out. She is visiting her mother, Mrs. Paul Menzel here.

Stella Saxton

Back From Italy

Miss Stella Saxton, who did canteen work with the Italian unit of the Red Cross in the last war and later worked among refugees with the Serbian unit, had new adventures to tell yesterday. She left Italy by plane in August for Lisbon and returned to the United States in September.

Mrs. Helen Crean, president of the unit, presided at the breakfast in the small ballroom of the Willard.

Of Deceased Members

The United States flag and the organization's banner were borne in by a group of members wearing uniforms such as they wore about 24 years ago in the service of the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. After the pledge to the flag, the unit stood in silent tribute to the memory of deceased members, while a bugler blew taps.

Miss Ruth McClelland, former national president of the league, read a prayer of George Washington's as the invocation. Others at the speaker's table included Miss Faustine Dennis, a former national president; Mrs. Wallace Chiswell, who is national patriotic chairman for the league; Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. William MacKay.

Red Cross Leader To Speak in Greenbelt

Mrs. Dwight Davis, who directs volunteer services for the American Red Cross, will speak on "Mobilization of British Women" at the meeting of the welfare department of the Women's Club of Greenbelt at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wendell H. Miller, with Mrs. Linden S. Dodson as assisting hostess. Mrs. Davis recently returned from a trip to England where she observed women's work in many branches of war service.

India Wants Liberty Pledge, Lecturer Says

One of the decisive battles of this war may be fought in or around India, and that possibility calls for a change in the British attitude toward India, Krishnashil Shridharani, writer and lecturer from India, said in the Near East Lecture Series for clubwomen yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

India wants a definite declaration that she is entitled to self-determination at the close of this war, he pointed out.

If this promise of liberty is given to India, she will throw her full strength into the battle for democracy, he said. Mohandas Gandhi is still a friend of the British people and he is holding the Indian masses back, so it is to the interest of both the United States and England to strengthen India's hand, Shridharani said. His country is already doing a great service for the democratic cause, but is capable of doing much more if she is aroused by the assurance of self-determination, he said.

The speaker, who is writing and lecturing in the United States, plans to return to India in the spring. A follower of Gandhi, he accompanied him on his famous "march to the sea."

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot was chairman for yesterday's lecture and introduced the speaker. A group from the audience attended the luncheon which followed. They included Mrs. Raymond J. Lapper, chairman of the lecture series; Mrs. Pinchot, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duell, Col. and Mrs. William Morrow, Mrs. William Disque and Mrs. Helen M. Moodie.

Sodality Union To Give Bazaar

Miss Anna Donnelly is serving as vice chairman. The supper will be under the direction of the executive committee, with Mrs. Louise Nock in charge. Chairman of hostesses will be Mrs. J. Floyd Maley and Miss Christine Hildebrand; refreshments, Mrs. William Samuels and Mrs. H. Widmyer; candy and punch, Miss Beatrice Deeds; dolls, Mrs. Belle Morrow and Mrs. J. Carley; decorations, Mrs. Lucy Goldsborough; utilities, Mrs. Catherine Sweeney; publicity, Mrs. J. A. Egan. In charge of other activities will be Mrs. Clara Ritter, Mrs. Fanny Hunter, Mrs. Sarah Kane, Miss Elizabeth King, Mrs. E. J. Repetti and Mrs. J. Clawson.

The supper will be served from 5 to 7:30 p. m., with the bazaar to continue to 10:30 p. m. on those days.

Arats Club to Hear Eric Underwood

"The Saving of Historic Art Treasures in England" will be the subject of a lecture by Eric Underwood, national trustee of English historic places, at the Arts Club, tomorrow night. Mr. Underwood also will show his famous collection of old silver spoons, including one dated 1399.

Hostesses at the dinner preceding the lecture will be Miss Bertha Noyes and Miss Edith Hoyt.

Phi Mu Chapter To Hear Miss Newhall

Miss Beatrice Newhall of the Pan American Union publications staff will speak on "Women in the Americas" at the meeting of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Phi Mu Sorority at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at the Kennedy-Warren.

Mrs. Kay Chapman is taking reservations.

Mexicans Spurn Nazis, Woman Lawyer Says

Citizens of the United States have the assurance that the Mexican government is making effort to keep Nazi influence out of that country, Miss Mary Agnes Brown, attorney in the solicitor's office, Veterans' Administration, told a group from the American Association of University Women, with Miss Olga Steig, president of the club, in charge.

Wearing a colorful fiesta costume of Mexico, Miss Brown spoke at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse, on her impressions of that country while a student at the summer school of the National University of Mexico the past summer.

Pointing out the increase of interchange between this country and Mexico, Miss Brown gave as an example the summer school enrollment. The institution, a pioneer summer school in Latin America for students from the United States, had an enrollment of 400 in the summer of 1940, and more than 1000 students in the past summer.

Miss Brown described her own courses—in the history of Spain, taught by the former rector of the University of Barcelona; a course of constitutional law in which she was the only woman from the United States; commercial law, and Mexican folk music.

Miss Brown's costume consisted of full red and green skirt with spangled trimmings, and with the Mexican eagle and serpent decorating the front; a white blouse hand embroidered in flowers. She was laden with silver bracelets and with red, white and green beads.

The luncheon was sponsored by the hospitality committee of the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W., Mrs. Chester B. Watts, assistant chairman of hospitality, was in charge of the luncheon.

Mrs. Keyes on WWDC

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, whose novel of Washington life, "All That Glitters," is just off the press, will be interviewed this afternoon at 3:30 on the "Women Who Achieve" radio hour, Station WWDC, by J. Jeanne Carter and Mrs. Edward R. Seal, who conduct this program.

Border Peace Efforts Told At Parley Here

Representatives of the peoples mandate in the Latin-American countries are taking united action to help speed settlement of the dispute between Ecuador and Peru which recently led to armed hostilities between the two countries, Senora Angel Acuna de Chason, peoples mandate leader in Costa Rica, told a conference here yesterday.

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Peoples Mandate Committee for Inter-American Peace and Cooperation, and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the organization's chairman for Latin-America, were hostesses at the luncheon conference at the Hay Adams House.

Among those attending were Senorita Marina Nunez del Prado, sculptress, who is mandate chairman in Bolivia; Senora Maria Castillo de Levi and Senorita Piedad Levi-Castillo, members of the mandate committee in Ecuador, and Mrs. Carl Hugo Farman. Senora de Chason as chairman of a subcommittee on the Peru-Ecuador situation said that the mandate group will present to the heads of their governments an urgent request that they intensify efforts to effect an understanding between the two countries.

Hysterically Starved for Affection, Young Wife Asks How to Cope With Marriage, in Which Fiftyish Husband Insists He Is Now Too Old for Lovemaking

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Approximately four years ago, I married a man 23 years my senior. He was 51 and I, 28. I was just "recovering" from an unhappy marriage that had ended in divorce when I met him. He was so kind and good and sweet that I fell in love with him in a different sort of way than I had loved my former husband, a man my own age. He was always of a mild temperament, whereas my former husband had been the fiery, intense type. Knowing him was like coming from a furnace into a cool, green valley. I thought his affection was wonderful.

All my friends warned me not to marry him. They said he was "too old" for me, etc. But I paid no attention. I thought if I put my whole heart and soul into the effort of making him happy, I would be happy, too. And I was happy, for a time. But during our second year of marriage, he began treating me more as a daughter than a wife. Then, one day, he told me that he was getting too old for love making, and while this was a shock to me, I couldn't help sympathizing with him. However, while I resigned myself to the absence of passionate love, I did not expect his affection to die, too. I had thought passion and affection were two different emotions. But he stopped kissing and caressing me, unless I positively asked him to.

Yet life without him is unthinkable to me. We have tried separating, but it seems no good. Always we come back together again. We have been separated by as much as a thousand miles, and we have been apart as long as a month. But it seems we can't live apart; although I feel that my life is being wasted. After our separations, he is very affectionate for a few days, and I am completely happy. Then he slips back into indifference, and I must beg for his attentions.

Sometimes I wonder if I am a "medical case." Several physicians I have consulted say that I should leave him for my own good. But I am just as miserable without him as with him. We both work for a living, and we are considered conscientious, reliable people. My husband is very attractive to women; and girls are always trying to catch his eye. And he seems to be interested in women, too; although not more so than he is in men and children. He just likes people generally. I am attractive, too, although lately I have been so despondent that I don't much care how I look. However, it is second nature with me to be well groomed, so I haven't grown sloppish, by any means.

It is a matter of desperate concern to me that I am no longer mistress of myself. In relation to my husband, I am like a puppet, with no mind of my own at all. I tell myself that I never will ask him again to kiss me, or to put his arms about me. And then I find myself doing it over again. I am ashamed and humiliated that I should feel as I do toward him, when he apparently does not want me. He insists, of course, that he does want me; but his actions prove contrary. He says positively there is no other woman; and I try to trust him, but somehow I can't. He expects me to trust him blindly, even though he shows me almost no affection.

He told me that his health was failing; that this was the reason he is always "so tired." But recently he was examined by a physician, who pronounced him in perfect health, for a man his age. Sometimes I think he gets a "kick" out of watching me cry—when he won't put his arms about me. I almost believe he is a sadist. But how a man could seem so sweet in the beginning, and then develop a morbid streak, is more than I can understand. The more I think about our situation, the more my head aches.

I have asked him if his "love and affection" will ever come back, and he says it is "very doubtful." He even says he doesn't expect to be alive five years from now. Yet he works, is always buying clothes, likes to show and enjoys a good meal just as other folks do. People who feel "about to die" don't act as normally as he does. He was a

Modern Doll Shows Frailties Of Humans

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

DOWN through the ages little girls have hugged their dolls in their arms and talked soothingly to them. They used to be satisfied with costly dolls that opened and shut their eyes and said "mama"—but whose features became worryfully misshapen in the presence of heat. And little did it matter, since they all came out of the same mold. Every China doll looked just like the next one—usually a baby doll or an angel face.

Today, although the golden haired doll with the pretty face is still in favor—children like dolls that stir their imaginations. According to Bernard Ravca, doll-maker extraordinaire of Paris, children—as well as grown-ups—are tired of dolls without expression. "They want them to appear real," said Mr. Ravca. "Not just dolls but real people." (Even as Mr. Ravca talked shoppers viewing his exhibit of famous character dolls, now at a local store, were heard to exclaim, "How very real they look! Just like humans!")

Mr. Ravca, who was sent to the United States by the French government to exhibit his dolls at the French pavilion during the New York World's Fair in 1939, has been working with dolls for 17 years. He has seen the evolution of taste in dolls from the era of the salon or boudoir dolls (whose faces he used to paint) to the demand for the human-likeness he makes today.

Says It's Coming Type
The character doll, in the eyes of Mr. Ravca, is the coming doll of this day and age. "Children of today are more interested in the things going on about them," he said, "and want to have dolls that look like real people." He bases his assumption on the fact that wherever he goes, children are always his most appreciative audience. They drink in the history about each doll and are being educated without knowing it.

To children, the fascination of the dolls lies in the fact that each one has a story behind it, which Mr. Ravca has built up through his own journeys about the countryside studying peoples and their habits. Adults, who consider the dolls as "collectors' items" enjoy the written history attached to each doll, too, but are more interested in the creative ability and artistic temperament that lies behind the creation of each doll.

Spiced by Variety
Most of the character dolls represent old people with wrinkles and lines—showing facial expressions so life-like and costumes so authentic that you expect the characters to get up and walk. They include peasants from all the French provinces, dolls from the invaded countries, and portrait dolls of such persons as former Premier Chamberlain, Paderewski, Lebrun, President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Hollywood actors, pioneers, Puritans, Indians, natives of Algeria, and Carmen Mirandi.

The majority of the dolls are amazingly little human creatures made with cotton faces, stitched here and there to achieve character lines. They are then covered with silk and painted. Mr. Ravca makes the heads, but a group of women dress the dolls in costumes native to the country and province, or state. The figures range all the way from 6-inch ones, which sell for as low as 50 cents, to life size dolls, selling for $1,500.

Mr. Ravca has won many awards with his dolls. The last medal was received at the World's Fair in Paris where 42 nations were competing. Mr. Ravca believes the award was influenced by the fact that the judges thought the dolls were real people. They went over to greet them and were so amazed to find they were dolls. The gold medal was awarded on the spot.

At present Mr. Ravca is occupied with finding a suitable place to house his collection of the rarest dolls. He is eager to present them as museum pieces to Washington so that children and grown-ups from all over the country may view them for educational purposes.

Realism Invades Doll World

Back yard gossips are these two character dolls who are busily engaged in tearing to pieces the reputation of a young girl. They are part of a collection of Bernard Ravca's dolls, being exhibited this week at a local store.

Make Sewing Stand for Gifts

THE VERY GIFT for a friend who knits or sews—an attractive sewing hold-all you can easily make from pretty flowery fabric and a camp stool. Spread it open. It's a handy little stand. Close it up and it goes anywhere!

To start with, take a camp stool without a back, remove canvas and, if the frame's unfinished, stain and wax or paint.

Then, for the stool part, cut a piece of chintz or cretonne 21 by 39 inches and two pieces (side panels) each 11 by 14 inches. You attach the large piece of fabric to the two side panels as in diagram in booklet. Stitch each long edge along bottom of panel and about 8 inches up the sides; make 1½-inch hems across tops of panels.

To fit the bag to the stool, first open stool to about 15 inches and keep firm with string. Run strips of fabric (19 by ¾ inches) through the hems of side panels, pull ends of strips over bars on stool and tack securely. Only thing left to do now is to gather the ends of the bag over the bars, stitch, and add handles of fabric!

For other attractive, easily made gifts see our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Gifts." Includes early American decorated tray, set of fruit-drink coasters, tin smoking set, writing portfolio, pot holders—many gifts you can make from odds and ends.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Gifts," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Soldier's Friend

Back at her old job of speaking her mind, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, famous reformer, announced yesterday a new campaign—one on behalf of the morale of service men.

"However, I am not going to deluge the men with home-made cookies, scrap-books or good advice," she told the press. "I am going to work on the civilian naggers, whiners, snobs, demagogues and racketeers who are largely responsible for whatever low morale exists in army camps."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she had resigned her recent appointment as chairman of public relations for the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Red Tape Division of National Defense.

"Too much protocol," she explained. "I had to get a writ of habeas corpus even to comment on the weather."

'Public Enemies' Are Listed

"Now that I am a free woman again," the crusading president of the Do Something About P. League continued, "I am going to try to aid army camp morale by going after the following public enemies:

"Tradesmen—especially restaurant and hotel men and their employees who give poor or grudging service to men in uniform because of the meager amount of money they have to spend.

"Feminine snobs—especially girls, who do not treat service men with the respect and consideration due them.

"Whining home folks who write blue and depressing letters to the men in camp.

"Ranting demagogues who create discontent among service men to foster their own political ambitions.

"Women's clubs who go on studying Browning and giving tea and pagents instead of devoting their time and energy to providing comfort and entertainment for service men on leave."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she had talked to men in army camps and was convinced they were not getting a square deal from the public.

"Some of these boys," she said,

"say that when they wear their uniforms into hotels they get glassy stares from everyone from desk clerks to bellboys.

(I am, of course, speaking of the privates.) They also tell me that often in restaurants they have difficulty getting served because they can't leave big tips. My own feeling, of course, is that tradesmen—or tradeswomen—who do this sort of thing should be put in concentration camps.

Feminine Snobs Are Assailed

"I also find much social snobbery on the part of women toward the private in uniform. Girls who are ready enough to go out with officers get sudden fits of priggishness about being seen in public with boys in the uniform of privates, fearing someone will think they haven't been properly introduced. I regret that there are no words in my vocabulary to express what I think of such feminine nitwits.

"I also feel that the whipping post is none too good for long-faced write doleful letters, etc., who write doleful letters to draftees. So many women, as soon as they take a pen in hand to write to the man at camp, immediately launch into all the bad news about the family ailments, and the bad crops, and the taxes. If a cat at home is siling, or if a chicken has the hip, the man at camp must hear it. Now I am going to put on a good stiff campaign against women generally and try to get them out of their letter writing doldrums."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she was working on a secret plan to "still the demagogues and agitators." All she would say about it was that in involved the making of phonograph records of the operations of buzz-saws and electric riveters.

The reformer also announced she was going to make a tour of the Nation to "yank club women out of their Victorian tea-party-few good barn dancers for service men and have on hand plenty of girls who were not pin-head social climbers."

Obviously, you have a normal affectional capacity; which is to say, an insatiable need both to love and be loved; to participate not only in a sacrosanct sexual companionship, but also to enjoy the fellowship of mind and spirit which grows out of that intimate comradeship, when it is sincerely cherished in mutual loyalty. The maintenance of your nervous, organic and psychological health depends upon achieving that type of relationship, to serve as the archetype of your social existence. The fact that you had made two marriages before the age of 30 proclaims your instinctive drive toward a pattern-of-living that would allow your normal emotions to have satisfactory and self-respecting play.

And since you cannot establish this psychologically imperative relationship with your present husband—not alone because of his sexual impotency, but also because of his monstrously callous attitude toward your nervous anguish (an attitude which is a derivative, no doubt, of those years when he was getting "around plenty," and leading a "rather wild life," at the expense of many another woman's finest feelings)—it seems to me urgently necessary for you to cut clear of him and "start a new life, on your own."

Society Whirls Into Record Round of Frolic

Hurjas' Party for Newspaper Columnist
Tops Record Number of Gay Social Events

By Hope Ridings Miller

Capital Calendar: A record round of parties had Government and social celebrities out in droves yesterday afternoon and last night.

Hope Ridings Miller

"I give up," sighed one dowager as she made an entrance at her third party of the afternoon. "I've got two more parties on my book, but I'm going to forget about 'em and stay right on here until time for dinner."

Earlier, she had attended Mr. and Mrs. Graham S. Kemper's 5-to-7 get-together at their home in Harrison Street. Mr. Kemper formerly was United States Consul General at Rome, and guests included a number of friends who have been in diplomatic service. At the same time Charles Mason Remy was also entertaining at a tea, the first in a series he has planned for this season.

The lady who had been to both those parties "gave up" and elected to linger at the third tea as long as possible when she sailed in to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja's home in Wesley Heights and took one good look at the interesting crowd assembled there.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurja were entertaining in honor of Bob Davis, the New York columnist, who has the kind of assignment most newspapermen only dream about. He can go anywhere he wishes. . . stay as long as he likes . . . and write as he pleases about anything that happens to strike his fancy.

"Everything—but politics," he said yesterday. "And I never was one for that, anyway."

Maybe not; but before the party in his honor was over yesterday he might well have changed his mind; for "big names" on the political front were all over the place. With their usual flair for choosing their guests from a number of different circles, the Hurjas yesterday had a particularly varied crowd calling on them from 5 until 8 o'clock. Rabid isolationist Senators mingled with interventionists. John L. Lewis tossed off a cup of tea with dowagers who have denounced him over their own tables. Social celebrities, who don't dare discuss anything more important than the weather ("because you never know who's listening") chatted with strong-minded personalities who express their opinions freely and flagrantly. Diplomats and residential Washingtonians also accented the throng that collected around the flower-decked tea table and spilled over into the surrounding rooms. Meanwhile, more notables were coming in to greet the Hurjas and their honor guest. Wearing a smart fuchsia crepe frock, with a slit, floor-length skirt, Mrs. Hurja received with Mr. Davis in the music room. The host, meanwhile, hailed his guests wherever he happened to be at the time.

Noninterventionists

Reflections in a Teacup: Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, surrounded the entire time they stayed at the party . . . Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, getting away in time to go on to a dinner . . . Senator and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye chatting with friends in one of the upstairs rooms, where a huge crowd collected and lingered . . . Mrs. Harold Walker asking friends in to her "help-China" party on Friday afternoon . . . Miss Elizabeth Howry chatting with Baron and Baroness Stackelberg . . . Sidney Taliaferro asking Mme. Solanko for a cup of tea . . . The Donald Richbergs, Mrs. Ollie James, and the Harry Meems, adding a lilt to the gathering . . . Mrs. Richard S. Jones seeing that the assistant hostesses got to their places at the tea table on schedule . . . Mrs. Wade Ellis and Mrs. Walter Distler, among those taking turns there . . . Clarence Hewes, coming on from several other parties . . . Mrs. Lionel Atwill breezing in toward the end of the party—"Just been to a lovely wedding," she said, and then proceeded to give the details . . . The Swedish Minister, Wollmar Bostrom, arriving with Capt. and Mme. Wessel . . . the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Burks Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs, among those present. Also, Mrs. Donald Downs, recently returned from a lengthy stay in New York; Fred Roy, and dozens of noted newspaper writers and their wives—a contingent always well represented at any Hurja party, and more evident that ever yesterday.

Many Guests en Route

Picked Up in Passing: Arriving for the latter half of the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, going on later to the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Will L. Clayton . . . Also on their way to dinner and the theater were Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck . . . Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Jr., tore off in time to give a dinner herself—"just a small affair for some of Chip's cronies," she said. She added that he would be off on a business trip to Bermuda the latter part of this week . . . Miss Margaret Frazer was telling friends that she has leased her home on Prospect Avenue to the Hume Wrongs, of the Canadian Legation, and has moved to an apartment at 1919 Massachusetts Avenue . . . and the Minister from Finland and Mme. Procope made the rounds at the party and then returned home in time to entertain at dinner.

Mr. Davis, who arrived here about 10 days ago, expects to linger on indefinitely; and then he may take a sudden notion to be off somewhere else to gather material. Anyway, his column, formerly headed "Bob Davis Recalls" is now "Bob Davis Reveals." His books? Well, they're so numerous, and so interesting, I haven't time to touch on them here.

Visiting Daughter And Husband Feted By Alva Adames

Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams have as their guests in their apartment at the Wardman Park, their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Uhl, of Pueblo, Colo. Mr. and Mrs. Uhl, who arrived in the Capital Monday night, expect to remain here about two weeks before returning home. Last night, Senator and Mrs. Adams entertained informally at a dinner in their honor and several more informal parties are planned for them during their sojourn here.

Miss Elaine Darlington To Go to N. Y. Debuts

Miss Elaine Darlington, daughter of Mrs. George Garrett, will go to New York this weekend to attend several debutante parties. While in New York she will be the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Robert Clarkson, who makes her home in that city.

Ice Club to Open Season Today With Special Program

They're sharpening up their blades out Riverside Stadium way for the opening session of the Washington Ice Club this afternoon at 5 o'clock. J. Edgar Murdoch, chairman of the club, has promised "special entertainment" for this meeting, and the medals won last year will be presented today.

John C. Borton is vice chairman; G. Howland Chase, treasurer, and Mrs. Creighton Peet is secretary. The board of governors includes Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. John C. Borton, Mrs. Dallas Dort, Lieut. Col. William McKee Dunn, Allan Fay, Melville B. Grosvenor, Clarence Herreshoff, Miss Cecil Lester Jones, Slocum Kingsbury, Mrs. Walter Mahony, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Clarence L. Parker, Daniel Partridge, Creighton Peet, who is rink chairman; Richard Sanger, Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, Metcalfe Walling and Mrs. Thacher Winslow.

To Blossom Christmas

Along with the appearance of holly and poinsettias, Miss Sara Boothe Miller—destined to be a glamour deb—will blossom forth. However, Miss Miller, who is now attending the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry, will miss the Thanksgiving festivities here. She will be presented to society at a dance on December 27 to be given by her mother, Mrs. William C. Miller, at the Sulgrave Club. Any number of parties are planned in honor of the bud, the dates to be announced when she arrives home for the Christmas holidays.

The Prochniks To Give Party

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik will gather in a few people on Friday afternoon for cocktails honoring Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill. The Hills, who were married this summer, are having difficulty finding time to attend all their parties. As a bachelor, Mr. Hill was one of the few men in this town who was asked to dine out almost every night. On Saturday Fred Roy will entertain at a dinner party for the Hills at the Sulgrave Club.

The Prochniks have as their guest for a week their daughter, Mrs. Francis Spalding, who has come down from Marion, Mass., to be with her family. She came here over a year ago from Cairo, Egypt, where her husband is Secretary at the United States Legation.

Carol Fries To Be Married Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving Day at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and in the great choir of the National Cathedral are the date, time and place selected by Miss Carol S. Fries, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, for her wedding to Ensign Robert Gwathmey Merritt, United States Navy.

The Rev. Charles T. Warner, of St. Alban's Church, will officiate at the ceremony which will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 3308 Woodley Road.

An early date was selected for the ceremony since Ensign Merritt will leave on sea duty shortly after the first part of December. Due to the brief time between the announcement and the ceremony there will be few formal parties for the young couple, though several informal events are already on the calendar.

Following the wedding and a brief honeymoon trip, the bride will resume her position here as interior decorating consultant, and will make her home with her family "for the duration" or until Ensign Merritt is detached from sea duty.

Hunt Dinner Will Be Given Tomorrow Night

A number of well known Washingtonians from official and residential circles will be present tomorrow evening at the fourth annual hunt dinner at the Fall Mall Room, Raleigh Hotel. Roast venison and ragout of deer, sent down from the New Hampshire woods, will be featured on the menu, which will be a gourmet's delight from start to finish. "Pink coats," usually seen only in fox-chasing events, will blaze forth on the waiters who serve the dinner, beginning at 8 o'clock. In addition to the dinner, there will be dancing and a special floor entertainment.

Philippine Commissioner Joaquin Miguel Elizalde will entertain a party of six. Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Kauffmann and Col. and Mrs. W. F. Tompkins are among those who have made reservations. Mrs. Raymond McCall, widow of the one-time Comptroller General, will entertain a party including Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Groom, Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Chevering, Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach and James Adams.

Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas will be in a party with Capt. and Mme. Karl Wessel, of the Swedish Legation; Miss Lee Carsons, George Abell and Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller. Dr. and Mrs. James McGuirk will have with them Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Hopkins and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daly.

Among others who have made reservations are W. E. Hayes, who will have 12 guests; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dunlap, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Battley, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorup, Dr. Daniel Lynch, James E. Dyer and a party of six, and many, many more.

Notes of Society

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will entertain informally at dinner tonight in their home on Wyoming Avenue.

The Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon entertained at a dinner party last night at the legation in honor of the Minister of Interior and Social Affairs of the Netherlands Johnkbeer van der Temple. Ranking guest at the dinner was the Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins.

Representative James Wadsworth returned yesterday from Fort Reilly, where he went to visit his son, Reverdy Wadsworth, who is in training there.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce, who have been at their home in Newport, R. I. for several days, returned last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Brayton Wilbur, of Burlingame, Calif., are here at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs have returned to their Virginia home after spending two months in New York.

Gallatin de Knox will entertain at an "after 8:30" cocktail party before the D. A. R.-S. A. R. dance Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lawrence entertained yesterday at a breakfast party at their Virginia home on Fort Hunt Road, Mount Vernon, in honor of Mrs. Lawrence's mother, Mrs. Frances R. Miller, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Norman Paschal Davis, of Pleasantville, N. Y., the former Miss Martha Waller, of Nashville, Tenn., arrived yesterday for a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Davis at their home in Alexandria, Va.

Miss Sophia Cooper will entertain at a cocktail party in her home Sunday afternoon.

Official and Residential

Col. T. D. Stamps, of West Point, N. Y., is here at the Hotel Martinique.

Mrs. Mae Hamilton has cards out for the dance which she will give December 6, at the Sulgrave Club, in honor of Miss Marian Hamilton.

Miss Muriel Maddox is spending a few days in New York. She will return to Washington the end of the week.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark Romanow of Boston, have just moved from that city to Washington. They are making their home with their son, Robert Rand, at 1410 Girard Street.

Venezuela Couple Visiting Capital

In town for a short while are Senor Oscar Augusto Machado and Senora de Machado, who came down from New York with their daughters, Senoritas Ana Teresa and Maria Cristina. They plan to sail November 23 for their home in Venezuela.

Senora de Machado is the sister of Senora de Fombona-Pachano, wife of the former Counselor of the Venezuelan Embassy. On Sunday the young Machado girls were guests of the First Secretary of the Colombian Embassy and Senora de Vargas on a tour of Annapolis. While at the Naval Academy they were guests of Midshipman Donald Wilson. When the Machados leave for New York to sail for home they will be accompanied by Senor Machado's brother and sister-in-law, Senor Gustavo Machado and Senora de Machado, who have been visiting in Washington.

Sen. Andrews' Wife to Leave For Florida

Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of the Senator from Florida, will leave the end of the week for Tampa, Fla., where she will wield a champagne bottle on the grow of a Navy troopship, the Electra. The Senator, who plans to be in Miami about the time of the christening—November 18—will probably join Mrs. Andrews for the event.

After the launching, Mrs. Andrews will go to Orlando, where, on November 19, she will be honored at a luncheon given her by the Democratic women there. From there she will go to Gainesville, Fla., to attend the homecoming football game, November 22, between Florida University and Georgia Tech. She will then return to Washington, where she will have as her houseguest Miss Dorothy Reeves, of Gainesville, who will stay with her a few days en route from New York to her home in Florida.

The Senator and Mrs. Andrews are making plans to spend Christmas in the Capital. This will be their first Yuletide spent anywhere but in their Florida home.

Cappels Give Tea This Afternoon

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cappel will receive a number of prominent Washingtonians at their lovely Georgetown home this afternoon at 5 to 7 reception in honor of Carlos Salzedo, world's leading harpist.

With Mr. Salzedo will be Marjorie Call Salzedo, his wife, who is also an accomplished harpist. Also an honored guest will be Rene Le Roy, eminent French flutist.

The Salzedos will arrive here this afternoon for the Salzedo concert ensemble performance in Constitution Hall tomorrow. This concert is the third in the Cappel Concert Guild series.

Miss Doherty Goes West to Attend Wedding

Miss Agnes Doherty, who makes her home with her uncle and aunt, Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, in their Wardman Park apartment, left Friday night for San Francisco where she will serve as a bridesmaid in her brother's wedding.

Her brother, Lieut. Paul Doherty, who lived with the O'Mahoneys in the Capital before going West to attend college at the University of Wyoming, will marry Miss Betty Negrotto in the post chapel of the San Francisco Presidio Saturday. She is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Sydney Negrotto.

Both Lieut. Doherty and his fiancée attended the University of Wyoming where he was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity and she was affiliated with Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity. Lieut. Doherty first met his bride-to-be when he was living in Cheyenne, Wyo., with the O'Mahoneys and her father was stationed at Fort Warren, Wyo. After his graduation from college, he went into an advertising concern in Cheyenne and was recently called into active Army service from his reserve status. After serving at Fort Lewis, Wash., and Camp Ord, Calif., Lieut. Doherty was stationed at the San Francisco Presidio where Miss Negrotto was living with her parents. Col. Negrotto is post adjutant there.

The couple plan to make their home in San Francisco, barring Army orders to the contrary. Miss Doherty will return to Washington by way of Cheyenne where she will visit for several days. According to her present plans she will be back in the Capital in about two weeks.

Capt. Mulligan Of Air Corps Weds Miss Shape in Ohio

From Ohio comes announcement of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Shape, daughter of Mrs. Robert L. Shape of New York and Ridgefield, Conn., and the late Mr. Sharp, to Capt. Denis Mulligan, Air Corps, Capt. Mulligan, now stationed at Wright Field, Ohio, practiced law in Washington before his return to active duty.

The ceremony was performed on November 9 by the Rev. P. O'Reilly of the Mary, Help of Christians Church, Osborne, Ohio. Mrs. Wayne Hall, of Glen Rock, N. J., sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, and Daniel F. Callahan was best man. Mrs. Mulligan's mother, who accompanied her daughter from New York, was formerly Miss Elizabeth Powell, of Atlanta, Ga. The bride was graduated from Mount St. Mary's Academy, Newburgh and Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Capt. Mulligan was graduated from West Point in 1924 and the following year from the Army Advanced Flying School at Kelly Field. He also holds degrees from Fordham University Law School and the Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University.

Rugby Parties Set for Tonight

Dinners, cocktail parties and house guests will make for merry goings-on before the rugby game at Griffith Stadium tonight, when British tars from the aircraft carriers Illustrious and Formidable, now at the Norfolk Navy Yard, will introduce their popular English sport to Washington.

Ranking guests at a dinner given by Mrs. Cary D. Langhorne at the 1925 F Street Club will be the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax. Others on the list are Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Sir Ronald Campbell, Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. Pott, Commander and Mrs. C. R. P. Bennett, Wing Comdr. G. G. H. De Boulay, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Miss Louise Boyd and Merritt Swift.

Chaplain J. N. C. Holland of the Formidable will be the house guest-of Mrs. Walter I. Tucker, and among others who are expecting visitors are Capt. and Mrs. Philip B. Eaton, U. S. Coast Guard, who will have two young officers from the Formidable staying with them at their home, Comyns Holm, on Klinge and Rock Creek Roads. Tomorrow the American Legion will give a sightseeing trip to the young Brits.

Planning to be in the Eatons' box at tonight's game, proceeds from which will go to the Community Chest and British War Relief, will be Maj. and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson and Capt. and Mrs. Edward Hastings, of the British Embassy. Also among those who will be in the three boxes reserved by the British-American Ambulance Corps will be Dr. and Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, Count and Countess de Castellane and Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow.

Heirloom Lace Preview Set for Saturday

Heirloom lace, recently sent here from London by Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary will be on display at a private preview at the British Embassy on Saturday, according to invitations just issued by the British War Relief Society.

The exhibition will take place at the Embassy from 3 to 6 p. m. and will include a group of rare pieces which belonged to Napoleon, Queen Alexandra, Queen Charlotte and Marie Antoinette.

Chester Gardners To Make Home In Arlington

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Gardner are on their wedding trip following the marriage Saturday evening in United Baptist Church, in Cherryside, Va., and upon their return will live in Arlington. The bride is the former Miss Christine Alton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Alton, of Ashburn, Ga. Mr. Gardner is the son of the late Frank H. Gardner. White chrysanthemums decorated the church for the candlelight ceremony at 8 o'clock at which the Rev. Elmer Lucas officiated.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Bradford Knapp, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with a high, round neckline and long puffed sleeves. The sweeping skirt ended in a train. A crown of orange blossoms held the tulle veil in place and she carried a bouquet of white roses centered with orchids.

Miss Elsie Deeters, of Arlington, was maid of honor. Her frock, fashioned in the long torso mode of blue taffeta and she carried American Beauty roses. The two bridesmaids were Miss Rosemary Bell and Miss Emma Petry. They wore similar frocks of bronze-rose taffeta and carried bouquets of tallisman roses. Two little flower girls, Joan Story and Jean Counts, were long pale blue taffeta frocks and carried old-fashioned nosegays. William Rauth served as best man and ushers were Forest Hastings and Charles Hastings. Mrs. Bradford Knapp, aunt of the bride wore a black and white costume with a small toque. Her corsage was of burnt orange chrysanthemums. Mrs. Charles Hoch, sister of the bridegroom also was gowned in black and white and wore a cluster of chrysanthemums. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the Bradfords.

Marie D'Elia, Genovese Wed

Sacred Heart Church was the scene of the marriage yesterday morning of Miss Marie D'Elia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Philip D'Elia, to Carroll Genovese. The Rev. Paul Repetti officiated in a setting of chrysanthemums and other fall flowers, and Miss Mary Lou Sullivan played the organ and sang.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with long sleeves, basque waist and full skirt, which fell into a long full train. Her fingertip veil of tulle was held by a Mary Stuart cap, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas.

Deep rose velveteen gowned Miss Antoinette D'Elia, sister of the bride, who served as maid of honor. Her Mary Stuart cap was of a matching color, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white sweet peas. Miss Mary Pearson, as bridesmaid, wore a deep blue velveteen gown with cap of the same shade. She carried tallisman roses.

Fred D'Elia, brother of the bride, was best man for Mr. Genovese, and ushers were William Costigan and Frank Walker. Mr. and Mrs. Genovese left immediately after the ceremony for New York, the bride wearing a brown dress with blue trimming, brown fur coat and brown accessories. Her corsage was white roses. The couple will make their home at 1814 Twenty-first Place.

Mrs. McShea, of the apostolic delegation of Washington, was an honorary guest at the wedding and reception.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

FOX HUNTING and many "hunt country" social functions in their honor will be on the calendar for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter Foster who will return soon from their wedding trip to make their home at Rutledge Farm between Middleburg and The Plains. Their recent marriage was the climax of a romance which began last fall in the hunting field soon after Mrs. Foster, who is the former Miss Anne Foster, of London, England, came to America.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Foster are devotees of horses and plan to take part in foxhunting as soon as they return from their trip to Williamsburg and other Southern places of interest. Mr. Foster, who is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James R. Foster, of Glenville, and the grandson of the late Capt. and Mrs. Edward Carter, of Carter Hall, Warrenton, is engaged in farming and is a member of the Orange County Hunt. He has numbers of relations in the "hunt country" who plan to entertain in the couple's honor later on.

Mrs. Foster was sent to America about two years ago by the London Foreign Office as assistant accountant at the British Embassy in Washington. Since her arrival in this country, she has been living in an apartment on Nineteenth Street with her cousin, Miss Edith Lawton, also of London.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster were married in a quiet ceremony Saturday at the Brookland Church in Washington with a reception afterwards at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston, on Wyoming Avenue. Dr. S. Paul Shiffert read the vows before the immediate families and a few intimate friends at 2 o'clock. The bride, who is the daughter of Arthur Foster, of England the late Mrs. Foster, is no relation to Mr. Foster.

THE BRIDE wore an afternoon gown of gold velvet, a matching small feather hat and brown suede shoes and gloves, and she carried a bouquet of brown orchids. Her cousin, Miss Lawton, was her maid of honor, wearing a wine-colored costume with a hat of the same shade. She carried a bouquet of tallisman roses. Little Miss Kate Palmer, of The Plains, a niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl, wearing a dunoonnet velvet frock and green hat and carrying an old-fashioned bouquet of mixed flowers.

Daniel Cox, of Millwood, was Mr. Foster's best man. The couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Lawton, of England, now living in Boston, before the living room mantle, which was banked with roses. The lower floor of the house was decorated throughout with different colored roses.

After several hours of merriment, Mr. and Mrs. Foster left by motor. She wore a green tweed suit and green felt hat for traveling.

Foxes and hounds were out yesterday for four hunts. Piedmont Fox Hounds, with A. C. Randolph,

M. F. H. met at Union at 9 o'clock. Cobblers Hunt riders gathered at Cobler Mountain Farm, also at 9 o'clock. Edmund Horgan and S. Prentice Porter are joint masters. Farmington Hunt, Mrs. Jack F. Jones and Roger E. Rinehart, joint masters, met at Dr. Watts at 9, and Reep Run Hunt was the earliest of all, meeting at 7 o'clock at Fox Hill, Gooseland County. John M. Hughes and James Asa Shield are joint masters.

The John Perrys To Live in West

Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Perry, Jr., whose wedding took place here last month, now are making their home in Kansas City, Mo. The bride is the former Miss Marjorie Frances Fakes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Seldon Fakes.

Metropolitan Baptist Church was the scene of the ceremony October 18. The Rev. John Compton Ball officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a frock of blue velvet with a matching hat. Her corsage was of white orchids. Miss Marion Amidon, maid of honor, was attired in burgundy velvet with a corsage of white gardenias. William Underwood was best man. Among the wedding guests who later attended the reception at the bride's home were Mrs. T. A. Jones, of Kentucky, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Ethel Underwood, of North Carolina, aunt of the bridegroom.

Gilman-Tilghman Troth Announced

Mrs. Harry F. Gilman, of Amherstburg, Ontario, Canada, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Isabella, to Charles Tench Tilghman, of Washington and Princess Anne County, Md. He is the son of Mr. Charles Tilghman and the late Mr. Tilghman.

The bride-elect attended Rosemont College. Her fiancé was graduated from the University of Virginia and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. Miss Gilman's mother, who was the former Fanchette Mullen, attended Georgetown Convent here.

Rodolfo Soriano Visiting Capital

Flying in from San Francisco on Monday, Rodolfo Soriano, a member of the House of Representatives of Bolivia, is now in Washington where he intends to remain for a week or so.

Senor Soriano was president of the Bolivian delegation at the second Inter-American Conference of Treaties and of the Fourth Pan-American Highway Conference held recently in Mexico.

Dorothy McCullough, William Black Engaged

Mrs. Minnie E. McCullough announces the engagement of her daughter, Dorothy Louise, to William Calmes Black, of Silver Spring, Md. The wedding will take place December 18 at the Woodside Methodist Church in Silver Spring.

AMERICA AWAKES TO THE DANGER OF HIDDEN HUNGER

HIDDEN HUNGER—a form of malnutrition that saps vitality and health—has aroused the nation to the need for diets that supply adequate amounts of all the essential food elements. In most of such diets, leading nutritionists advise pure, fresh MILK.

Yes—high on the list of foods in most diets recommended to combat HIDDEN HUNGER is pure, fresh milk—a pint a day for adults—a quart for children.

For your entire family—an ideal milk for this important job is Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" Milk.

Like regular milk—it contains many of those vitamins, minerals and proteins you need for vitality and health. (See table below.) Unlike regular milk—the cream remains distributed all through the milk. It also tends to digest more readily—and has a delightfully new and tempting flavor.

Another advantage... every quart contains 400 extra units of precious Vitamin "D."

Truly, this Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" Milk is a better milk—ideal to help you combat HIDDEN HUNGER. Start your supply today. Order from our milkman—your favorite store—or telephone Michigan 1011.

Postoffice Inquiry Seeks to Offset 'Boom'

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is making a business survey of the gigantic Postoffice Department which was displaced only a few weeks ago by the War Department as Uncle Sam's largest agency. The survey of investigation, whatever you might like to call it, has been in progress for several months and will continue indefinitely. It covers the entire department, even the division of inspectors; and Postoffice inspectors are making the survey. Heading up the survey is Fred C. Ironside, jr., a confidential assistant, who's a close personal friend of Walker's.

The investigation is unique because it wasn't inspired to shake up the personnel and to oust or discredit key officials. In fact, the Postmaster General says the survey is to date has added weight to his belief that the department is operated by able and efficient officials.

Walker has sought the cooperation of the officials in making the survey. Before a division is tackled by the investigators the matter is discussed at a staff meeting. The survey, Walker hopes, will produce enough information for him to make future plans. Postoffice business is booming but he doesn't want to build up a huge staff now and go through another such retrenchment period as the Postoffice experienced in 1933. Postal revenues in the 1940 fiscal year were $66 million dollars in 1941 they were $12 million dollars, and Walker estimates that they will be $50 million dollars this year.

In a recent speech at a postmaster's convention, Walker revealed the object of the survey. He said in part: "We must search out ways and means to simplify procedure and eliminate waste, reports, and forms that have become outmoded. We must seek better and more accurate information as to costs, seek possible reduction of costs and yet retain and increase efficiency in operations. . . I should like to see rules, regulations, orders and instructions which guide postmasters in their day-to-day duties simplified and written in plain language. Some of our rules lack clarity, many are outdated, many require amendment and modification." Some of the rules and regulations, it is said, haven't been changed in 50 years.

With her is Helen Gollart, winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs' award to the best singer in the United States under 18 years, who was the featured vocalist at the ball. Standing with Commander Lambert are Stephen T. Nickka, George G. McLeish and Phillip R. Belt.

Morning Frost Follows Freeze; Warmer Later

An early morning frost to wind up a low temperature of 30 degrees during the night was forecast for today.

Slowly rising temperatures today will reach a high of 52 degrees this afternoon. This is only a shade above yesterday's high of 48 degrees, at 3:15 p. m. Yesterday's low was 32 degrees at 5:35 a. m. The current spell of freezing weather has not resulted in any frozen automobile radiators, the American Automobile Association reported yesterday. A more extreme drop in temperature sustained over a longer period is needed to cause motorists trouble, the A. A. A. said.

Fair and somewhat warmer weather can be expected tomorrow, with higher temperatures Friday, the Weather Bureau forecaster reported.

Meeting Postponed

Because of Armistice Day the Stanton Park Association has postponed its monthly meeting until next Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Peabody School, Fifth and C Streets Northeast.

Ceremony Took Place 20 Years Ago in Church in Chalons-sur-Marne

Twenty years ago a hard-boiled United States Army sergeant stood before four flag-draped caskets in a little church in the French village of Chalons-sur-Marne. The solemn rays of the sun streamed down upon the coffins lined up in front of the altar. The sergeant grimly took a step forward and hesitated before the second casket. Then he reverently dropped a red rose on it.

The sergeant was Edward F. Younger and the casket on which he dropped the rose contained the body of America's World War Hero—the Unknown Soldier.

Last night Sgt. Younger, now a postoffice employee in Chicago, came to Washington on the twenty-third anniversary of the signing of the Armistice and told a radio audience how he had been delegated to choose this country's Unknown Soldier. He appeared on "We, the People" program, which was broadcast from the Wardman Park Hotel. "I was standing outside that little church with five other soldiers," Younger said. "Our colonel walked over to us. In his hand he held a bunch of roses. He said, 'Men, it is my task to choose one of you to perform a great and sacred duty.' He stood there for a long minute. Then he called my name. 'Sgt. Younger,' he said, 'in this church are four caskets. In them lie the bodies of four nameless American soldiers. Go into the church. . . put a rose on one of the caskets. That is all.' "I went into the church and walked by the caskets. I passed the first one. . . the second. . . then something made me stop. And a voice seemed to say, 'This is a pal of yours.' I don't know how long I stood there. But, finally, I put the rose on the

Capt. J. W. Pierson, Commander Of 6th Precinct, Asks to Retire

after 37 years' service, he was learned last night. He submitted his application to Maj. Edward J. Kelly Monday. The Commissioners have not yet acted upon the request but it is generally agreed they will approve it.

Retirement of the veteran officer will become effective December 1, if the Board of Commissioners approves, Pierson is 61.

Capt. Pierson was appointed to the force in September, 1904. Nine years later because of meritorious service he was made an acting sergeant and in December, 1913, was promoted to full sergeant. He was raised to the rank of lieutenant in December, 1917, and promoted to captain in 1932.

Personnel records at headquarters revealed that Capt. Pierson has won 19 commendations for all types of police service. He also was commended by the King and Queen of England following their visit here.

Pierson has been ill for the last 10 days and has been confined to his home at 54 Nicholson Street Northwest. He declined to discuss his contemplated retirement last night, saying he would rather wait until the Commissioners have acted upon it.

"I haven't heard a thing from the Major or the Commissioners," Capt. Pierson declared. "It looks to me like it's being held up for something."

Maj. Kelly, however, indicated that the request will be sent to the Commissioners this week.

"If Capt. Pierson is retired, Walter Thomas, a Detective Bureau lieutenant, probably will be promoted to fill the vacancy."

Mrs. Leute to Talk
"Child Adjustment in the Family" will be the subject of a lecture by Mrs. Mary C. Leute, secretary of the Social Service Exchange, tonight at 8:30 before the Jewish Community Center's Institute on marriage.

One Killed, Nine Hurt In Crashes

Arlingtonian Dies In Leesburg Collision; Four Lieutenants Injured in D. C.

One person was killed and nine others were injured in traffic accidents in and near the city as streets and highways were jammed with holiday motorists.

Leon Bohrer, of 1133 Utah Street, Arlington, Va., was killed when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a pole and turned over near Leesburg, Va. Two companions, Miss Lucy Fisher, of Boyville, N. J., and Chester Culp, of Arlington, Va., were injured. All three were removed to Loudoun County Hospital, Leesburg.

Four Marine officers suffered minor cuts and bruises when the automobile in which they were riding, collided with a Capital Transit Co. bus at Fourteenth Street and Madison Drive Northwest. Lieut. James P. Powell, 23, of Quantico, Va., was driving the sedan and Lloyd E. Sandifer, 30, of 4033 Nichols Avenue Southwest, was the bus operator.

Powell was one of the injured. Three of his companions, Lieut. Vincent Holland, 22; John Goulding, 22, and Peter Hahn, 23, also were hurt. The four received first aid at Naval Hospital and were released. All are stationed at Quantico.

Albert T. Boyd, 28, of 1009 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, suffered injuries of his left ear and abdomen when his automobile struck a telephone pole on Route 224 near Selcra, Md. He was brought to Providence Hospital for treatment. In an accident at Forty-fifth and Ellicott Streets Northwest, Wilfred Baber, 18, of 1711 Capitol Avenue Northeast, was unhurt, although his automobile was overturned, crashed into a telephone pole and caught fire. Baber was reported to have got out of the car just after the crash, and a moment before it caught fire.

Police said his car was in collision with a stake-bodied truck operated by Thomas G. Duvall, 42, of Gallegersburg, Md. The latter was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

Two colored men were seriously injured when their automobile demolished yesterday afternoon when they crashed into a tree along Central Avenue near Largo, Md.

The men, Isaac Tryce, 2309 Ontario Road Northwest, and James Combs, 1819 Benning Road Northeast, were taken to the Casualty Hospital by the gladstone Rescue Squad, where each was found to have suffered a fractured skull.

Sgt. Elton Turner, of the Prince George County police, who investigated, said the speed of the car was so great that, after hitting the embankment, it cleared a 4-foot fence alongside the road, after which it smashed head-on into a tree, crushing the top.

Students to Open Radio Station Tonight
The first student-operated radio station in the District will have its formal opening tonight at 8 o'clock when GBS, at Georgetown University, begins to broadcast.

The station, a member of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, will be 100 kilocycles on the radio dial. However, the station's range is limited to the campus only. University officials will speak tonight on the opening program.

Motorist Robbed Of $35 at Stop Sign

Isadore Stamler, a liquor dealer, closed up his store at Eighth and V Streets Northwest, got in his automobile and headed up V Street to his home at 4937 Conduit Road Northwest.

Dutifully he stopped at a stop sign at Thirteenth Street. A thug jumped on the running board of his car, peeked a blue-steel pistol into his face and demanded his money.

Stamler handed over his billfold, containing $35 and the bandit ran down V Street into the night.

Bjornstad to Sing

Elvin Bjornstad, lyric dramatic tenor, of Oslo, Norway, will be soloist for a sacred concert to be presented by the King of Gospel Singers tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Eleventh and H Streets Northeast.

Three Selectees From Fort Belvoir Outwit Trio of Coeds in Radio War of Wits

D. C. Passes USO Goal By $14,000

Defense leaders in the District of Columbia can expect $14,000 more from the USO campaign of the summer than was anticipated, it was announced yesterday in a preliminary review which showed Washingtonians had oversubscribed their quota of $250,000 by that amount.

Taking out $145,000, which goes to national USO, and around $13,000 for cost of the campaign, this means each of the 100,000 soldiers stationed in the Washington area can count on about $1 worth of free USO entertainment in the District.

Where to get additional money, nobody seems to know. Requests for Federal funds have been repeatedly refused, and national USO funds are supposed to go to small towns "swamped by large military reservations." Washington participated in the USO drive as a "self-sustaining city" and was permitted to keep 40 per cent of everything collected.

Final audit of the campaign will be completed soon, Secretary Edwin N. Lewis said, pointing out that 175,000 persons had made donations—and that "this takes a lot of auditing."

Soldiers Win Contest by 75 to 50; Question of Brainpower Still Unsettled

Really, it was still impossible on the basis of last night's little war of wits over Station WWDC to decide the seething question of whether selectees or college coeds have more brain power.

If one wanted to jump right quickly at conclusions he could surmise from the score, selectees, 75, coeds, 50, that the men in uniform are as a whole an amazingly intelligent lot and anyhow several barrelsful more intelligent than coeds.

These two allegations may or may not be true. If one is interested in proving that the allegations are so much bunk he can merely detail the educational careers of the selectees picked for the program.

Now when you place an accountant, a lawyer and a sales manager up against two cheer leaders and a University Woman's League president in a quiz program—well, it's a free country and everyone is at liberty to put his chips where he likes.

The cheer leaders were Mina Brown, 20, a junior at George Washington University, and Mary Lou Courtney, 18, American University freshman. The Woman's League president was Mary Powell, 22, senior at Maryland University. Very pretty, all of them.

The soldiers sat very military, occasionally leaning over the table so that the voice would be sure to get into the microphone. The girls giggled considerably, especially when they missed questions.

The giant wit was Private Purdy, who scored 40 of the soldiers' 75 points. Private Purdy sat stiffer than anybody.

DiMaggio Named A. L.'s Most Valuable Player

Yankee Ace Beats Out Williams

Travis Rated 6th
In Writers' Ballot;
Feller Ranked 3d,
Thornton Lee 4th

By George Kirksey
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, Nov. 11.—Joe DiMaggio, who set the New York Yankees on fire with the greatest one-man hitting show in major league annals, received official recognition for his feat today with the announcement of his selection as the American League's most valuable player by a committee of 24 baseball writers.

DiMaggio, who hit in 56 consecutive games from May 15 through July 17, nosed out Ted Williams, Red Sox's great hitter who won the American League batting title with a tremendous average of .406, to win his second most valuable player award in the past three years. DiMaggio received 15 first-place votes and 9 for second place to score 291 points.

Close Balloting

Williams drew 8 first-place votes, 14 for second and 2 for third to give him 254 points. It was the closest finish since the most valuable player award voting system was changed in 1938. Under the present voting system, 14 points are awarded for each first-place vote, 9 for second, 8 for third, etc.

Bob Feller, who ran second to Hank Greenberg, last year's winner, placed third with 174 points. The Cleveland fireballer, who led the American League in victories, with 25, didn't receive a single first-place vote but landed 14 votes for third place and 6 for fourth.

Thornton Lee, Chicago White Sox southpaw, who won 22 games and led the American League in complete games with 30, finished fourth with 144 points. Lee received one first-place vote, only other player to get a first-place vote besides DiMaggio and Williams.

Charlie Keller Fifth

Charlie Keller, Yankee outfielder, who was second in homers with 33 and second in runs batted in with 122, landed fifth place with 126 points, followed by Cecil Travis, Washington infielder, who finished runner-up for the batting title with an average of .359. Travis scored 101 points and landed one second-place vote, only other player to get a second-place vote besides DiMaggio and Williams.

The Yankees landed three men in the first ten—DiMaggio, first; Keller, fifth, and Gordon, seventh—but they came nowhere near dominating the American League award as did the Brooklyn Dodgers, National League champions, who finished one-two-three and grabbed six of the first ten places in the senior circuit's contest.

Selection Justified

DiMaggio's selection seems justified on the basis of his value to the Yankees in the pennant drive. When DiMaggio started his hitting streak, May 15, the Yankees were in fourth place, 5½ games behind the league-leading Indians. Inspired by DiMaggio's heroic hitting, the Yanks skyrocketed into the lead and when joining Joe finally was halted New York was entrenched firmly in first place with a seven-game lead over the second-place Indians.

DiMaggio led the league in runs batted in, 125, and was excellent by Williams only in batting average—.357 to Williams'. 406—home runs and runs. The Yankee outfielder topped Williams in hits, 183 to 185; in doubles, 43 to 33; in triples, 11 to 3, and runs batted in, 125 to 120.

The committee was made up of three writers from each American League city, who were appointed by Tom Swope, president of the Baseball Writers' Association.

Army Eleven 'Digs In' for A Tough Siege

Special Dispatch to The Post

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Disappointed but not dismayed after their first defeat of the season, the Army football team today dug in for what Coach Earl Blaik called "three of the hardest games on our schedule."

Chief concern of the Cadet squad, at present in the meeting with the Penn powerhouse at Philadelphia's Franklin Field Saturday. The following Saturday Army will make its final home stand against the up-and-coming West Virginia University eleven before tackling Navy November 29 at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium in the traditional service school clash.

Saturday's contest in Philadelphia will be one between two once-beaten teams. Penn's lone defeat came at the hands of Navy (6-13), while Army was downed last week-end by Harvard (6-20). On the basis of comparative scores against mutual opponents, the Quakers appear to have the edge. Penn swamped Harvard (19-0) in the season's opener. Yale has been defeated by both Penn (28-13) and Army (20-7), as has Columbia. Army downed Lou Little's Lions (13-0). Penn's margin of victory over Columbia was closer (19-16).

This will be the third Army-Penn football game. The first meeting took place in 1901, the Cadets winning 24-0. No contests were played between the two teams until last year, when the Quakers posted Army, 48-0, the worst defeat in the Military Academy's gridiron history.

Approximately 475 cadets, all of them members of West Point athletic teams, will make the trip to Philadelphia this Saturday, along with the Military Academy's 90-piece band.

Hank Greenberg Is Given Big Hand By Parade Crowd

By The Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 11.—Sergeant Hank Greenberg appeared in an Armistice Day parade here today and received as much acclaim as he did as the Detroit Tigers' home-run hitting outfielder.

Greenberg, inducted into the Army last May, rode on an anti-tank gun carrier as one of 1200 Fort Custer troops participating in the parade.

To a boy who followed him for nearly a block, asking for an autograph, Greenberg shouted, "Go see the colonel."

Broncos Score 3 Times on Passes After Webfoot Roll Up 21-19 Lead Early in Game

By The Associated Press

Portland, Ore., Nov. 11.—Santa Clara's resilient Broncos bowed to the University of Oregon football team today, but it was the accurate place-kicking toe of Utility Fullback Jim Newquist that turned the trick, 21 to 19, before a crowd of 16,000 fans.

The Broncos came to life with a terrific passing game late in the third period after Oregon had scored three times and converted three times. The time clock came to Oregon's rescue after Santa Clara, which once completed nine passes in a row, had scored its third touchdown.

Until they got their great passing machine in gear, the Santa Clara Broncos had no menace and the big webfoot team whipped together a 14-point lead in the first quarter.

The first was the product of two passes, Tommy Roblin to Russ Nowling, end, for 15 yards and Roblin to Tony Crish for 28 more and a touchdown.

The second came five minutes later when Roblin, the Webfoot left halfback, took one of Al Santucci's punts and raced 71 yards over the goal line.

Santa Clara rarely got into Oregon territory and never threatened until Oregon had tallied again, this time in the third period. Duke Iversen, Oregon quarterback, intercepted Ken Casanega's pass on the Santa Clara 37, Oregon's fifth interception in ten Santa Clara passes, and Oregon scored on a pass. Roblin to Crish, from the 6-yard line.

From then on it was all Santa Clara.

Easter Holiday Killed in Spill In Pimlico Seventh

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 11.—A spectacular spill as the field ended the backstretch in today's seventh race, cost the life of Easter Holiday, a 6-year-old pacer, owned by Mrs. Veader Leonard. Apprentice Jockey Donald MacAndrews was thrown but escaped injury.

Easter Holiday was in front when he fell and he suffered a broken leg. The son of Mad Hatter, popular in Maryland at one stage of his career, was mercifully destroyed.

Bred in Blue, another member of the field, broke down in the running and was pulled up. Leadore Bieber's Landlubber, the favorite won the test of a mile and a half and paid $5.60.

The winner had to survive a claim of foul. Flying Legion paid $17.50.

Larson Lauds Navy Eleven—Starts to Work

By The Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 11.—Knocked out of the undefeated ranks by mighty Notre Dame last Saturday, Navy's gridiron warriors returned to the practice field today to improve their blocking and tackling for the Princeton clash November 22.

"We have no game this Saturday," Middle Coach Swede Larson declared, "so we are planning our work accordingly, realizing that we must get in our heavy work before November 19."

A. A. U. Choses All-America Swim Teams

By The Associated Press

New York, Nov. 11.—All-America swimming teams for both men and women were nominated by committee of the Amateur Athletic Union today, subject to acceptance by the fifty-third annual convention of the A. A. U. at Philadelphia this week-end.

Otto Jarets, of Chicago, headed the men's team selections, being named for the 110-yard free style and on three relay teams. Other choices, and the events for which they were named, included: Bill Smith, 17-year-old Hawaiian, 220 and 440 free style and one relay; Adolph Kiefer, back stroke and relay; Kiyoshi Nakama, 880-yard and mile free style; Jose Balmore, breaststroke and individual medley; Steve Wozniak, long distance individual and relay; Earl Clark, both dives and Takashi Hirose, two relays.

Nancy Merki, of Portland, Ore., was tabbed as the year's outstanding woman swimmer and placed on the All-America in the 440, 880 and mile free style events. Gloria Callen was listed in the backstroke and medley relay; Branda Heiser, 100-yard free style and relay; Helen Crenkovich, two dives, and Ann Hardin, long distance individual and team.

Miss Cotter Scores With Bay Gelding

D. C. Equestrienne Realizes Childhood Dream in Winning Knockdown-and-Out

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Madison Square Garden, New York, Nov. 11.—Realizing a life-long ambition of his young owner, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie tonight won the knockdown-and-out championship of the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden.

Making his first appearance since his great qualifying round in the third phase of the event Saturday night, Rocksie jumped off against F. H. Taylor, Jr.'s Birdwood Hazard and cleared 19 fences without a knockdown to defeat the New York entry. The victory was worth $655 to Miss Cotter, Washington equestrienne.

Six horses went clean in the original round as 12,000 Armistice Day fans rendered rafter-splintering applause. Among the finalists were Lieut. and Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, Jr.'s Hi-Ho, of Fort Myer, Va.; Russell Stewart's Play Girl and Fred Wettach's Plymouth Rock and Mrs. E. A. Anderson, Jr.'s Our Mr. Jorjacks. Hi-Ho, leaping well but without the tremendous spring of her earlier national performances, slammed into the seventh fence immediately after Birdwood Hazard's smooth and faultless trip.

Hazard Lacks Final 'Kick'

In rapid succession the various other horses experienced similar difficulty over the intricate "special course" arranged for the event, leaving only Rocksie as a threat to the Taylor entry. Bouncing into the ring in a latter, Rocksie, too, went clean, narrowly grazing the last fence but leaving it intact.

Hazard, completely unspectacular and seemingly tireless, looked confident as he returned for the last jump-off, but he lacked speed as he went into the second fence, and he rolled the top pole. Southern followers, realizing that the knockdown-and-out title was within two fences of being in Miss Cotter's tackroom, set up a wild din as he came into the ring, but their shouts were small in comparison to the rebel yell Rocksie's owner gave after he cleared the brush and headed into the rails.

Without a false move, he was inches high over it and landed on the ground with the championship his.

A Dream Comes True

For Miss Cotter, it was the culmination of a dream she has had since childhood, and marks her fifth try with the bay gelding.

"I'd rather see that knockdown-and-out than anything in the world," she told friends earlier in the day.

"It would even mean more to me than the Garden open jumping championship. Rocksie's a knockdown-and-out horse; he just does it. Without a false move, he was inches high over it and landed on the ground with the championship his."

Members of the Peruvian military team, just regaining their "Land" after the upsetting effects of 17 days of sea enroute here, scored their first important victory tonight as 23-year-old Lieut. Carlos Alfaro rode Ayacucho to victory in the international individual military championship event with a clean performance over a winding course.

In a jump-off with the United States' hitherto unbeatable Dakota, little Ayacucho again turned in a perfect score and Dakota had one knockdown, so that the North American entry was second. There were three ties for third—Major Henri Luebbertman on Dinger.

Largest Crowd At Rockingham Sees Warrior Win

By The Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Nov. 11.—B. A. Dario's brown colt Blue Warrior won the Armistice Day Handicap today before the largest crowd that ever attended a racing program at Rockingham Park.

The Dario speedster with Eddie Connolly in the irons won by a length over B. Lewin's Ahalon while the latter was just a trifle in front of John R. Macomber's Side Arm. Mrs. W. Wyse's Allway was fourth in the field of six.

The winner paid $12.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 12, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When the firing stopped on the Western front at 11 o'clock in the morning 23 years ago, Man O' War, the greatest race horse in American history, was merely a nameless yearling in the Glen Riddle barn; a pitcher named Babe Ruth had been the hero of the World Series a month before; your talking machine, with plenty of surface noise, was probably committing the popular "Rose of No Man's Land."

We observed Armistice Day, 1941, with our nose close to the old files, which still permitted plenty of clearance, of course. On the day in 1918 that the Kaiser, fingering a cigarette and not looking particularly distressed, was making his way into exile across the Dutch border, Exterminator was being lapped as the favorite to win the Bowie Handicap. Dustin Farnum was riding the range at the Criterion Theater in Zane Grey's "Rainbow Trail" and the Knickerbocker Theater of the pre-snowslide days was advertising Norma Talmadge in "A Perfect Thirty Six."

You could buy a seven-passenger Chandler, complete with crank and six-man top, for $2095. But the next year, you were warned by the District traffic department that you'd have to carry a license tag on front as well as in the rear of your horseless buggy. Three years had passed since Illinois coach had introduced the new-fangled huddle to pro football, replacing the old-fashioned signal calling.

Dempsey Working in Shipyard

Big Jess Willard was king of the heavyweights, having knocked out Jack Johnson in 28 rounds at Havana three years before, but a fiery young 185-pounder named Jack Dempsey was beginning to make talk, especially after his 14-second knockout of Fred Fulton. Dempsey was working in a Pacific Coast shipyard at the time; at least he was a couple of years later when he became important enough to figure in those slacker charges.

A little Italian named Pete Herman was the bantamweight champion of the world. That was before he went blind and retired to the little French quarter nightclub he now owns in New Orleans. Mike O'Dowd, the Fighting Harp, was king of the middleweights, and Bennie Leonard was champ of the lightweights. Cleveland's Johnny Kilbane ruled the featherweights. Prize fighting was illegal in New York State.

Thirty-six hours before the Armistice was signed, Tennessee's football team had taken perhaps its worst beating in history. Vanderbilt had licked 'em on that week-end by a 74-0 score. On the same Saturday, Notre Dame was tied, 7-7, by a team of service men from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. That was not too surprising, however. On that Great Lakes team was one George Halas, the same fellow who now owns and coaches another pretty good football team called the Chicago Bears.

Georgia Tech didn't do badly on that Saturday afternoon preceding the Monday Armistice. The score read: Georgia Tech 128; North Carolina Agricultural and Engineering School, 0. Georgetown romped through a Fort Myer team, 87-0, that day with Buckley scoring five touchdowns. That was the year when the football rules committee had decreed that substitutes could not communicate with their teammates on entering the lineup.

Golf Pros Tinkered With Steel Shaft

Chick Evans was the big shot of golf. He was the hold-over champion in the National Open and National Amateur of 1916, because the golf folks abandoned their tournaments in 1917-18 on account of the war. Alex Stirling was top in women's golf. Certain professionals were tinkering around with some new-fangled gadget called the steel shaft, and the aluminum brassies were on the way out.

The latest casualty list carried by the newspapers announced that 638 American soldiers had been killed in action, on a day unspecified. German sailors were refusing to give up the Berlin fleet under the terms of Foch's demands and were scuttling their ships in Germany's ports. "The American Army of Occupation" was a new term in United States affairs.

Ty Cobb was doing all right. The final baseball statistics showed that he had won the American League batting championship for the seventh year, this time with an average of .382. In the National League, the batting champ of the season was Brooklyn's Zach Wheat. Baseball went all the way through its 154-game schedule in 1918, after curtailing its season on September 1 the year before, on order of Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

Babe Ruth was a better pitcher than he was a hitter. In the World Series against the Cubs, the left-handed Ruth and the submarine ball artist Carl Mays, were the big heroes of the Red Sox's four victories in the six-game series. Ruth won two games by scores of 1-0 and 3-2. Mays did all right, too. He beat the Cubs twice by 2-1 scores. The pitching was pretty good those days. We just thought you might be interested in some of these things, 23 years ago.

Alsbab Faces 7 Rivals At Pimlico Today

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11.—With the thirty-sixth running of the $7500 Walden Stakes headlining Pimlico's race card tomorrow, the primary interest lies in those who will attempt the well-nigh impossible task of turning back the great 2-year-old champion, Alsbab. This colt is pronounced fit and ready to give his best in the mile and one-sixteenth event and the world knows that his "fit and ready" is about as potent as anything yet seen on the American turf. Alsbab was on the track this morning for his regular gallop.

In spite of the "might of the mighty," seven other horses have been put through the entry box to face Alsbab. Trainers of these horses make no bones about the size of the job before them and few, if any, really believe they can take the measure of the great Chieftain flyer. However, regarding second money in the Walden it is a "horse of a different color." The contest for that not-to-be-sneezed-at spot is going to be hot and heavy. At least two colts, according to their respective entourage, are mortal locks to run second.

Fair Call is the horse that startled the country by winning the Ardsley Stakes in a gallop, beating some of the best and establishing a new track record for one mile and 70 yards of 1:41 4-5. Trainer Fletcher is of the opinion that he'll be second and maybe give the champion a real run for his money.

Clifford Porter, master mind of the famous Dixiana Farm, property of Charles T. Fisher, will send postward a small brown colt called First of All, a son of Sweep All out of the mare Jimena Lee. First of All, bred at Dixiana down in the big grass country, is small but potent, and his connections are convinced he can beat Fair Call.

First of All has started eight times in his short career, and he has never been out of the money. He won his initial start in Chicago on a Thursday and ran back on Saturday in the Washington Park Futurity to be a good fourth behind Alsbab.

"He has a lot of early lick," said Trainer Porter. "Twice we have outbroken Alsbab in Chicago, and stayed out there on top for quite a bit of the journey. I believe this colt will go on over a distance of ground, and I'm confident that he'll give a good account of himself tomorrow in the Walden."

Alsbab is expected to be a 1-to-3 shot.

G. U. Prep 'Futures' Are Victors, 13 to 7

Their fifth straight victory was registered by the Georgetown Prep "Futures" yesterday, a 13-7 margin over Blessed Sacrament. Dave Graham and Connie Harrell scored for the winners, and Pope for the losers.

Minnesota Increases Lead Over Texas in Writers' Grid Poll

Duke Third, Aggies 4th In Ballots

Notre Dame Ranked Fifth in Consensus; 28 Teams Near Select Ten Rating

New York, Nov. 11.—There's a practically perfect setup this week for those unexpected happenings that football fans call upsets.

In the fifth weekly Associated Press ranking poll, 28 teams were singled out by 123 sports editors and writers throughout the Nation as being worthy of mention for "first ten" ranking. Coming out on top of this list in order were Minnesota, Texas, Duke, Texas A. and M., Notre Dame, Stanford, Michigan, Northwestern, Alabama and Duquesne.

Notre Dame and Northwestern clash Saturday in a game that figures to be a toss-up no matter how you look at it. The other eight leaders run into opponents that are likely to forget all about being underdogs when they get out on the field. In fact, a good many coaches who think of what happened to Fordham last week might be willing to trade for an opponent with a reputation that would put their boys on edge.

Gophers Face Iowa

The pairings send Minnesota, whose 15 straight victories have made the Gophers the first choice of 99 of the 122 experts, against Iowa, which has suffered only one bad beating in five Western Conference games. Texas, with only four first-place votes but a total of 881 points as compared to Minnesota's 1187, faces Texas Christian, a team with a record much like Iowa's. Duke, first choice of 11 experts for 844 points, runs into North Carolina, which would count the season successful if it could beat the Blue Devils.

Texas A. and M., unbeaten and untied, takes its chances against Rice, Stanford meets Washington State, Michigan plays Columbia, Alabama faces Georgia Tech and Duquesne encounters Mississippi State, which split one first-place vote with Mississippi and polled 1111-6 points for thirteenth place.

The "Second Ten"

In the "second-ten" group, Fordham, Navy and Mississippi have no games scheduled this week but Pennsylvania (No. 14) plays Army (No. 19), Missouri (16) meets Oklahoma, mentioned for 1-2-3 points, Harvard (17) plays Brown, Boston College (18) faces its Sugar Bowl rival of last January, Tennessee, and Ohio State (20) meets Illinois. This week's voting put Minnesota in an even more commanding position than it held at the same stage last season. Then the Gophers were given a total of 1314 points but were hard pressed by Cornell and Texas A. and M., Stanford, Michigan, Notre Dame and Northwestern also were ranked in the first ten for the corresponding week of 1940.

Redskins Are Amused Over Bear Stories

Washington Pros Refuse to Heed Reports of Chicago Eleven Being in a Slump

By Merrell W. Whittelev

Attempts to convey to the Redskins the idea that the Chicago Bears are in a slump and have lost their early season zip find the Washington club only wryly amused.

Word from Chicago has Coach George Halas requesting the sports writers to lay off such elegant phrases as a "miracle team" and "supermen," as he told them long ago they were giving the Bears too much of a buildup.

This slump is supposed to have hung over the past three games, against the Steelers, Packers and Rams, when the league champions rolled up only 79 points against 38 for the opposition.

Apparently the Bears were expected to hold to that 45-point-a-game clip of early season. When the last-place Pittsburgh Steelers were beaten only 34-7, the Bears were reported weary and bedraggled, the fitness of their five exhibition games and four lopsided league victories was missing.

A week ago Sunday the Packers knocked the Bears out of the unbeaten class and the league lead, no longer were they invincible. Last Sunday the Cleveland Rams brought a five-game losing streak to Chicago and early in the fourth quarter, in what was supposed to be a pushover for the Bears, the Rams were trailing only 21-13, and had the ball on the Chicago 5-yard line. The Bears stopped the threat, however, and won, 31-13.

The Bears are comparative strangers to the second-place slot in the Western division of the league standings. The great Halas point machine, with new records in ground and pass gaining and first downs, has lost one game in the last three and won the other two by only 18 and 27 point margins. That's a slump for the Bears.

Three mainstays of the Bear first-string club, Norm Standlee, Ray Nolting and Joe Stydahar, missed the Ram game with slight injuries, but they will be ready for the Redskins Sunday afternoon in Washington's first Chicago visit for a regular season game since 1933.

The Bears won, 31-7, three years ago and in a ten-game series with Washington the Bears have won six, lost three and tied one. Two were title playoff games and each won one.

The Redskins worked the usual two hours yesterday morning at Griffith Stadium and the program varied little from the usual Tuesday drills. Coach Ray Flaherty has noth-

Pair of 63's Top Mid-South Golf

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 11.—A pair of North Carolina youngsters and two veterans led the field today in the first round of the twentieth annual Mid-South Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Represented in the play were members of the United States Army and Air Force, the British Royal Navy, big league baseball and a number of the Nation's best golfers. It was the beginning of the golfing tourney season at this sandhills resort.

B. C. Young, Jr., of Lexington, and Henry Stiers, Jr., pro at Leaksville, scored a 31, 32-63, to tie with Edward Vognow, Chicago amateur, and Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., pro, who scored 32, 31-63. Young and Stiers played together on the Lexington High School golf team and Stiers has been ordered to report to the Army in January.

When Amateur Vognow hit his first tee shot 280 yards down the middle, Armour turned to the gallery and said, "I brought him all the way from Chicago to help me." Vognow helped Tommy on three holes. Young helped Stiers on seven.

Leo Walper paired with Joe Kirchner, of Washington, scored a best ball of 69, six strokes back of the leaders. Walter McCallum, Washington amateur, paired with Pro Harold Zimmerman, Flint, Mich., for a best ball 70.

Levi Yoder, of Washington, paired with D. M. Duffield, officer of the British navy now in United States port for repairs for a best ball 73.

Bonaventure Beats Anselm On Late Rally

By the Associated Press

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 11.—Power plays carried the St. Bonaventure football team to two fourth-period touchdowns today and a 13-6 victory over the St. Anselm's Hawks in a game marred by frequent fumbles, pass interceptions and penalties.

Although St. Bonaventure forced the play most of the time, the Hawks scored first in the third period on a 55-yard drive. With Dale O'Connell and Jack Treanor doing most of the ball carrying, St. Anselm's marched to the 2, from where Andy Garvey plunged over.

The pounding the Hawks were taking began to tell in the final period and St. Bonaventure's Freddie Grace scored twice standing up. St. Bonaventure Position: St. Anselm Position: L.C. Billy Conn Signs For Tune-up Bout In Baltimore Ring

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 11.—Johnny Ray, manager of Pittsburgh's Billy Conn, said tonight that Conn would fight an unnamed opponent in Baltimore "about January 22" in one of a series of tune-up fights in preparation for the match Conn hopes to get with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis next summer.

Ray said that while he could not name Conn's Baltimore opponent it would "not be an outstanding fighter" and the match is intended only to give Maryland fans "a chance to see Conn."

Ray said other matches after the first of the year would be held in Toledo, Ohio, and Washington, D. C.

Star Colgate Back Called by Uncle Sam

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 11 (INS).—

"Jo-Jo" McCourt, Colgate star half-back from Yonkers, N. Y., tonight notified Coach Andy Kerr that he has been "called up" for duty in the Army Air Corps and tomorrow will report at Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala.—three days before the Red Raiders meet their oldest foe—Syracuse.

McCourt enlisted last summer subject to call. A year ago he led the Colgate team in ball-carrying, averaging 5.4 yards per try.

Football ranking lists are just about the ultimate in slipshod daftness; as witness unbeaten Duke's drop of several notches in one of the lists after it beat a pretty fair Maryland team 50-0. Saturday Duke beat a hopeless Davidson team 56-0, and gained a notch in the same poll—while Fordham was dropping from second to sixteenth. . . . But there are variations of even ultimate daftness. The Lambert ranking list of Eastern colleges places Catholic University in twenty-seventh position, with .850, which should be deeply resented by all the schools ranked lower—inasmuch as Catholic University gave up football last year!

Ryder Team May Play in Buenos Aires

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP).—The possibility of a 1942 golf match between the Professional Golfers Association Ryder Cup team and a team of South American stars created much favorable comment today among P. G. A. officials attending the organization's annual meeting.

President Tom Walsh, who announced yesterday that the P. G. A. will try to line up the event for late summer or early fall in Buenos Aires, said he believed such a match "would be a big factor in cementing the relations of the United States and South American republics."

Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament bureau manager who has been named manager of the Ryder Cup team, believes South American pros could come up with a team which would give the Ryder Cupsters a great battle.

"There are five stars who might form the nucleus of the South American team," Corcoran said. "They are Jose Jurado, Martin Pose, Eduardo Blas, Aurelio Castanon and Enrique Bertelino. Then, too, there is the chance that amateur stars might be asked to play. Mario Gonzalez made a fine impression here this past summer." Corcoran said he recently has had letters from Sam Snead and Jim DeMaret, now on a South American tour, in which these stars praised the fine manner in which they have been received.

"DeMaret, who won the Argentine open, wrote he'd had a fine time and hoped he could return, while Snead said 'the people here can't do enough for us.'"

The Ryder Cup team includes both DeMaret and Snead.

20,000 Expected to See British Soccer, Rugby Teams Play

2 Exhibitions Here Tonight To Aid Funds

Members of Crews Of H.M.S. Formidable And Illustrious to Battle at Stadium

The redcoats are coming tonight, primed for the first real British display of soccer and rugby Washington sports fans have been offered, and an exciting time is anticipated for some 20,000 spectators at Griffith Stadium starting at 8 p. m.

It's the night, remember, for the clash of crew members of H. M. S. Formidable and Illustrious, British carriers now at Norfolk for repairs. In addition to a large slice of thrilling action, spectators are given the chance to help the local Community Chest, the British-American Ambulance Corps and the Bundles for Britain, the charities for which activities will be staged.

Rugby Holds Spotlight

Biggest drawing card for tonight's crowd no doubt will be the rugby clash, something completely strange to District of Columbia citizens. The British go for the game almost as rabidly as the United States eats up football, and the crowd will be anxious to see why.

Officials who saw similar demonstrations in Richmond, Norfolk and Portsmouth call the game every bit as fast as football. It has no time outs, few pauses between plays and is rapid, bruising and full of odd developments. Tonight's play will go on whatever the weather, which really must be drizzly for rugby purposes. On a soft field players aren't liable to as many injuries in their flimsy shorts and shirts.

Bands of the Royal Marines and the United States Marines will furnish music along with the Peppo Glee Club. The program will be opened with the massing of the colors by the American Legion National Guard of Honor.

Notables to Attend

Prominent persons on hand will include Lord and Lady Halifax, Army and Navy officials and representatives of all British agencies in Washington.

On the public address microphone will be Lieut. Comdr. H. I. G. Rylands, of the Formidable, who will attempt to explain the pastime as it progresses. Tickets are still available at the Willard Hotel, A. G. Spaulding, the Hobby Shop, the American Legion Club and the stadium.

Hagerty Holds Deep Respect For N. C. State

In the opinion of Coach Jack Hagerty, Georgetown's eleven will have its hands completely full Saturday when it plays host to North Carolina State at Griffith Stadium.

The teams have not met for more than 20 years, the last clash resulting in a 27-0 triumph for the Hoyas, but Hagerty looks to the Wolfpack's 1941 record for his worries. His own team's letdown against V. P. I. after defeating Mississippi is also a contributing factor.

N. C. State, after holding a 13-0 lead in its clash with V. P. I. last week, finally lost out, 14-13, and it will be the repercussions of that defeat which will make the Pack a tough foe.

Against the Carolinians Hagerty may be forced to operate with Ben Bulvin, his best running back, seeing only brief action. The young star limped off the field after the Maryland game with a reinjured ankle and a final decision on his condition will not be given until today.

The local football followers Saturday's game promises added appeal with the appearance of Art Faircloth and Flash Gordon on the North Carolina State squad. Both starred at Anacostia High during their scholastic careers.

Y. M. C. A. to Stage Elaborate Sports Program Tonight

An elaborate sports review program for the entertainment of Y. M. C. A. members and their friends will be presented tonight by the Central Young Men's Christian Association in the gymnasium of its building at 1738 G Street Northwest.

Both men and women are to be guests. The program, scheduled to start at 8 p. m., is designed particularly to aid new "Y" members to become acquainted. The occasion officially has been designated as "Make Friends at the Y. M. C. A. Night."

Arch McDonald, radio sports announcer, will be master of ceremonies. Included in the list of events will be jiu jitsu, under direction of Joseph Chiang; wrestling, under direction of David Armstrong; fencing, under direction of Wright M. Carney; gymnastics and tumbling, under direction of William E. Hutzell.

The Washington Y. M. C. A. Whirlwinds will perform in tumbling exhibitions and both boys and girls will give exhibitions in gymnastics. Social dancing will follow the sports review.

Little Agrees With Referee Who Erred on 52-Yd. Lion Run

Columbia Coach Explains Play on Which Official Bobbed, Costing Team Big Gain

New York, Nov. 11.—Coach Lou Little of Columbia today refused to accept the admission of Referee Dave Maginnes that he had made a mistake in recognizing a 53-yard Columbia gain in its football game with Penn at Philadelphia last Saturday.

Maginnes said last night that the shovel-pass play on which the Lions took the ball to the Penn 40 actually was legal, though he had brought it back on the ground that Paul Governall, who threw the pass to Stew McIlvennan, had been stopped.

"I don't think Maginnes made a mistake," said Little. "If the same play came up again, he ought to do just as he did and blow his whistle. No one could have thought Governall, apparently trapped back on our 5-yard line, was going to get rid of the ball, especially since two men already had hit him and a third was about to do so."

"If Governall hadn't got rid of the ball and four or five more men had hit him because of a slow whistle, then we would have squawked. As it was, it was just a rub of the green and we'll leave it that way. Our games are played on the field, we accept official rulings, and we don't wait to see the movies to decide whether we've won a game or lost it."

Maginnes said he had his whistle in his mouth as he ran up on the play, and "was going to blow it when three Penn men hit Governall. But I hesitated for a second. When I did blow it, Governall had shoved the ball to McIlvennan. Had I blown it when Governall was stopped, I would have been all right, but by failing to blow it I made the pass legal."

Penn won the game, 19-16.

Carl Steel's 162 Game Sets Pin Record

Carl Steel's record 162 game for Anacostia and Joe Sedgwick's 174 for Christ Church topped the East Washington Church League at Mt. Rainier, with the former helping his quintet to high team game with a 604 total as Douglas No. 1 garnered the set laurels with a 1713. Bradburn took all three from Swen Class.

BROOKLAND

Ed Newcomer topped the Methodist Church League at Brookland Recreation for Rhode Island No. 1 with a 167 single and 417 set, which helped his team win high game with a 598 count as Douglas No. 1 finished stronger to roll high set of 1681. Mt. Vernon No. 1 lost two games to Emory No. 1, the first losses suffered this season.

Bob Bour, of Cleveland Park No. 2, and Graham Fashaw, of Woodridge, No. 2, led the Letter Carriers League at Brookland, with respective highs of 136 and 362, with the latter helping his team take two from Brightwood, No. 2. Connecticut Avenue had 575 for high team game and won the odd tilt from Brightwood, No. 1, as Cleveland Park, No. 1, took two from the Chevy Chase Runts and posted a 1600 for high set as well.

SILVER SPRING

The competition was stiff in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring, with three men tying for high individual set, but little Dick Mascari, Arbaugh's Restaurant, earned the most honor for he coupled a 365 set to high game of 162 to spark his team to the odd skirmish over Jacobson Florist. Teammate Jimmie Carroll also had a 365 set and Al Hovey-King, E. C. Keyes, met the challenge with an identical score. Arbaugh's had 629 for high team game, with Sherer's Men's Shop rolling 1725 for top set.

CLARENDON

Aline Fairchild, of Rite-Way Contractors, with 127-337, and Jackie Polaski, of Monroe Pharmacy, with 337, divided individual honors in the Ladies' Major League at Clarendon Bowling Center, the latter winning a free entry in the Ladies' 108 Handicap event Saturday. The C. & F. Clerks had 530 for high team game, with Colonial Ice Cream taking set honors with a 1522 set. Elliott & Short won three from Emma Lee Beauty Salon, while Colonial Ice Cream took a sweep over Fox Barbers.

The Men's Major League was topped by Dan Harris, of Cohen Realty, with 159, and Bob Hough, of Miller Builders, with 379.

Terp Defense Is Stressed In Hard Drill

Maryland's football team started an extensive defense program yesterday for its game with V. M. I. here Saturday.

Main objects of toil that will occupy much of the Terps' time all week are two V. M. I. stars, Joe Muha, 210-pounder, and Bosh Pritchard, not so big but just as dangerous. Both are triple-threat backs in all that the words imply.

In fact, Muha, whom Coach Pooley Hubert and other Cadet followers loudly acclaim as all-American, beat the Terps last year at Lynchburg, 20 to 0. Maryland made 15 first downs against 8 and gained 300 yards to the Cadets' 202, but a blocked kick and Muha turned the tide decisively.

Muha scored all three touchdowns, one after intercepting a pass and running 62 yards. Pritchard is a sprinter on the track team but Muha can beat him on the gridiron in a football suit. Maryland, though, has some capable backs who can run and pass, and gets much hope out of the fact that its line will not be outweighed as greatly as it has been in its recent games.

In fact, all things considered, Maryland feels that it has about an even chance with the Cadets, especially if it can come close to checking Muha and Pritchard. V. M. I., with these two setting the pace, has scored 12 touchdowns in 7 games this season, 3 against Army, and was shut out for the first time by William and Mary last week.

The report won't be given to the local draft board for two or three days, but both the 24-year-old infielder and Dr. Joseph B. Williams, who conducted the examination, seemed to think that Lou was a pretty solid physical specimen.

Bohemian Bomber To Meet Judson

Frank Judson, one-time Harvard wrestling coach and long regarded as one of the better known mat stylists in the game today, will meet Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, in a 30-minute bout on tomorrow night's show at Turner's Arena.

They will have it out in a supporting scrap to the co-feature battles between Nanjo Singh, the "cobra clutch" king, and Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "strong man," and Pat Fraley, Pacific Coast titleholder, and Rough Rudy Dusek.

Judson and Pinto hope to land a headline spot in the next few weeks, and an impressive victory for either may turn the trick. They are entered in the elimination tournament Promoter Joe Turner is conducting.

Big Jim Henry, better known as the Green Hornet, will take on Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain, in a special 30-minute scrap, and Herbie Freeman, of New York, will engage Fred Carone, of St. Louis.

How to go about selling a set of silverware...?

THAT was the problem facing Miss Jean Kavanaugh recently. She couldn't hang a sign out the window or canvass from door to door. But she could place an ad in the "Miscellaneous for Sale" columns of The Post! This turned out to be exactly the right answer; Miss Kavanaugh sold the silverware in one day. Today she says, "Post Want ads certainly are fast workers!"

YOU'RE right, Miss Kavanaugh! And there are plenty of other advertisers who'll agree, too. Week in and week out, The Post Want ad office gets letters and phone calls telling of fast results from the "Miscellaneous for Sale" columns. Dozens of Washingtonians have learned lately that this is the smart way to sell household furnishings of every variety—washers... refrigerators... sewing machines... bedroom, living room, and dining room furniture. Just read what these advertisers say:

"Three-piece bed set sold for $35! Post ad got fine response."—A. H. St. Dennis.
"Refrigerator sold in a single day! Calls from many prospects."—F. B. Talbot.

McGowan Paces Devitt to 33-ON-T.S. Rout

Stellar Back Hangs Up 3 Touchdowns

Fullback Smith Scores Twice in One-Sided Battle At Losers' Field

Starting on the second play of the game, George McGowan, Devitt Prep's ace ball carrier, hung up one of the finest scoring performances of the local season yesterday, as he led his mates to a 33-0 smashing of National Training School on the latter's field.

McGowan, taking the ball through center from his own 20, dashed 80 yards to a touchdown after only one play had been run. Later he added two more 6-pointers to bring his total to 18 points for the game.

Also outstanding in the one-sided contest was Fullback Smith, who accounted for two touchdowns on short plunges. Left End Boyle rushed in and tackled N. T. S.'s Anderson for a safety in the second period, and the only extra point was contributed by Manilli in the final quarter.

Prep stuck strictly to a ground game, hurling only three passes throughout. It completed one of these for a short gain.

Central Game With Western Heads Card

Except for two championship games—the Tobacco Bowl game in Richmond and a couple of old contests—the local schoolboy football season will be wound up this week-end and consequently action will be hot and heavy as teams attempt to improve their poor records or cling to their good ones.

A contender for one of the title games—the interhigh championship—will be the Friday program will be decided Friday in the meeting of Western and Central at the latter's stadium at 3:15. The affair, to settle the western division's foe for Anacostia High's eastern division title, should be one of the most hotly contested of the year.

Also on the interhigh program, though having no bearing on the crown, is a Roosevelt-Wilson engagement at the Rider stadium. Here, too, there should be no lack of excitement as two of the most improved clubs in town make their final stab at victory.

Rounding out the Friday program are invasions of Eastern by St. John, Fairfax by Devitt Prep, Hopewell (Va.) High by G. W. of Alexandria, and the Western Maryland Frosh by Bullis. Saturday's play finds Tech playing at York (Pa.) High, St. Albans entertaining St. James and Landon invading St. Andrews, of Middletown, Del.

Meanwhile at Washington-Lee, in Arlington, Coach Harry Deming is preparing his Little Generals for their annual Northern Virginia title battle with G. W. High. The game will also be played on Thanksgiving in Alexandria, with the Generals defending the championship.

Harper Is Winner In Argyle Tourney

J. D. Harper's 88-22, 66 proved best in the Argyle turkey tournament yesterday. Trailing the winner were Ralph Wells, 86-19, 67; H. L. Wilson, 82-13, 69; L. G. Johnston, 78-8, 70; F. L. Williams, 75-5, 70; L. Ashburn, 91-21, 70, and George Bond, 83-12, 71.

Argyle officials announced it was Jimmy Lake and not Jimmy Wright, as reported, who scored a hole in one on the thirteenth Monday.

D. C. Pro Five to Play Renaissance Here

While awaiting a important meeting of the American League in New York, Mack Pospisil, manager-coach of the Washington Brewers professional basketball team, announced yesterday that he had arranged for the District club to meet the Renaissance colored team at Turner's Arena on Friday night, November 21.

Illinois Dog Leads Foxhunters' Futurity

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 11 (AP)—Helen K. owned by Albert A. Krueger, of Metropolis, Ill., swept into a commanding lead in the Chase Futurity of the National Fox Hunters' Association trials today.

Helen K., a full sister of last year's futurity winner, Jack K., amassed 410 points in what old-timers declared was one of the highest totals ever scored in a single day's running of the event. Her 220 points yesterday gave her a total of 630.

St. Albans Seconds Tie Alban Towers

St. Albans School second team battled the Alban Towers eleven to a 13-13 stalemate yesterday at the Saints' field.

Petworth Practice

Petworth A. C. basketball team, member of the Heurich League, will hold its second practice tonight at the Salvation Army gym at 1075 Thomas Jefferson Street, Georgetown.

Merchants Win

Taft Merchants' 85 pound football team defeated the Taft Bears yesterday, 13-0, for their ninth straight victory of the season.

Dunbar High Routed, 47-0, By Armstrong

Championship honors in the colored high school football series went to the Orange and Black warriors of Armstrong yesterday when they bowled over Dunbar before a holiday crowd of more than 4,000, 47-0, at Griffith Stadium.

The Armistice Day crowd witnessed the raising of the National Civil Defense flag between halves by the James Reese Europe and James E. Walker Posts of the American Legion and auxiliaries, accompanied by the Europe Post band, drum major and diminutive high-stepping majorettes, inaugurating civilian defense week.

"Wild Bill" Christian and "Curly" Powell started the hostilities early in the first quarter, carrying the oval down the field from the Armstrong 49 to the Dunbar 2. Here Armstrong fumbled and Dunbar recovered, but Hiale punt in the end zone was blocked for a safety.

Again these backs carried the ball from the Dunbar 47 to 22 on an off-tackle play to Powell, who passed to Christian, good for 22 yards. Day followed through immediately with a 20-yard pass to Medley for the first touchdown.

Armstrong scored two touchdowns in the second quarter, with its second team in action. The first was accounted for when Day heaved a 40-yard pass to Powell, who was dropped on Dunbar 4. Day then skinned Dunbar's right end to a touchdown standing up. The half ended just after three passes, the first, Washington to Robinson, good for 13 yards, and the last, Ross to Washington, 45 yards to the end zone, brought another touchdown.

Another pass, Day to Freeman, scored a touchdown after a 10-yard run, early in the third quarter. Armstrong received the ball on the following kickoff, and Francis went through the Dunbar center 17 yards, on two plays. On the third, Francis threw a beautiful pass to Day, who was run out of bounds on the Dunbar 10, after a 25-yard sprint. Christian accounted for a touchdown through center from this point.

Dunbar then sent in Calvin Scott to throw passes from the 10-yard line, but the Armstrong defense was too good.

A touchdown, with three minutes remaining, was accounted for by another Foster-Christian march down the field from the Dunbar 41, Christian placing the ball on the 1-yard stripe, and Powell carrying over.

The crowd was leaving the park, Ross, to close hostilities, tossed a 50-yard pass to Medley who scampered across the goal line, Freeman converting around the end.

Touchdowns—Medley (2), Day, Freeman, Washington, Powell, Christian, Points (2), Ross, Day, Freeman, Washington, Scott, Lane for Clarke, Strickland for Jones, Brown for Seragusa, Washington for Day, Ross for Powell, Bayler for Christian, Bayler for Christian, Tinsley for Bayler, Williams for Strickland.

Another game of record caliber has just been turned in by a 191 shot by Chuck Tolson in the Spillie major league. This is the third largest single shot by a Washington bowler so far this season.

The Washington Ladies' League standings and averages are just in, and we find a great race under way for the high-average honors. Lorraine Gull is on top with 112-17, closely pressed by Lucille Young, with 112-11, and a host of others with averages well above the 110 mark.

Garvin's Grill holds high team set with 1687 and also the high game of 603 while Lucille Young has high individual set of 387. Jacobson's Florists and Garvin's Grill are deadlocked for the league lead with 17 won and 10 lost.

Pass Beats Landon

Catholics Join Clerics Picture a New Britain In Honoring Arising From War's Agony Anniversary

By the Associated Press
Baltimore, Nov. 11.—Solemn rites, attended by approximately 10,000 persons, today commemorated the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Society of St. Sulpice and the sequentennial of its establishment in the United States.

Every seat on the main floor of Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory was occupied when members of the Catholic hierarchy, monsignors, priests and members of religious orders completed a procession that opened the ceremonies.

Among the high-ranking Catholic leaders who joined the procession and took part in the solemn pontifical mass were Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia; the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States; and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington.

Altogether 99 bishops occupied the gilded chairs directly before a large platform on which was erected the altar. They were flanked by the monsignors, priests and seminarians.

Archbishop Curley was pontifical for the mass. The sermon was delivered by Archbishop John J. Mitty, of San Francisco. Officers of the mass were the Very Rev. Anthony Velez, S. S., superior of the Theological College, Catholic University of America, Washington; the Very Rev. George A. Gleason, S. S., president of St. Charles College, Catonsville, Md.; the Rev. James A. Laubach, S. S., vice rector of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, subsec.

Pope's Letter Read
A letter from Pope Pius XII to the Very Rev. John F. Fenlon, S. S., provincial of the Sulpicians in the United States, was read by the Very Rev. Magr. Joseph M. Neilligan, chancellor of the archdiocese of Baltimore and Washington, immediately after singing of the gospel of the mass.

Pope Pius recalled his visit to St. Mary's Seminary when he visited the United States as papal secretary of state.

He wrote, in part: "As so many of our devoted children in the United States join with you, under the auspices and patronage of our beloved brother, Michael, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, in celebrating the sequentennial of the founding of St. Mary's Seminary, we wish to assure you of our paternal interest in this first anniversary of your country and to convey to you our heartfelt felicitations on this joyous occasion."

Cornerstone Laid
Later, Cardinal Dougherty pronounced solemn benediction at ceremonies in connection with the laying of the cornerstone for the new St. Mary's Seminary Chapel. Other events in the anniversary celebration included a dinner at St. Mary's at which Archbishop Curley was host to about 1000 members of the hierarchy and clergy.

Postlude
Century-Old Don Pasquale Is Presented

By Ray C. B. Brown.
Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Charles L. Wagner's production of Giuseppe Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" in Constitution Hall on Tuesday night. The cast:

Don Pasquale..... Oscar Laesser
Norina..... Stella Andrea
Ernesto..... Bruno Landi
Malatesta..... Francesco Valentino
Conductor: Giuseppe Bambochech

Under the scenic disadvantages inseparable from operatic productions in Constitution Hall, a vivacious and enjoyable performance of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" was given last evening by the company assembled by Charles L. Wagner for touring purposes. With experienced Giuseppe Bambochech as conductor and Desire Defares as stage director, the opera buffa moved with snap and precision, while the principals acquitted themselves excellently in the embroidered arias and intelligibly in the recitatives. The evening was well worth while both for those who are familiar with the music and for those who were hearing it for the first time.

Stella Andrea was personally charming and vocally delightful in the role of Norina, the mischievous young widow who contracts a mock marriage with Don Pasquale in order to win his ultimate consent to her real marriage with his nephew. She has an ingratiating stage presence, acting ability and a flexible voice of clear intonation. She phrases with ease and her placement of tone is always certain.

A new England—with class distinctions and prejudices "blitzed," with a new respect for human values and a new soul found through the war, was portrayed here yesterday, by leaders of three faiths, back from an observation tour of England and Ireland.

They indicated in the messages that were broadcast over Station WWDC that a like transformation on an international scale must figure in any plans for a reconstructed postwar social order.

Addressing a luncheon of the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference of Christians and Jews before distinguished religious, civic, governmental and business figures of several faiths, they were Dr. Everett Clinchy, the Rev. Vincent Donovan, O. P., and Rabbi Morris Lazaron.

Dr. Clinchy, Presbyterian minister and brother of Dr. J. Russell Clinchy, former pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church here, is president of the National Conference; Father Donovan is a Dominican priest and national director of the Catholic Thought Association, and Rabbi Lazaron has been spiritual director of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation for 25 years.

First to speak from the rostrum in the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel, Rabbi Lazaron assured that the Nazi blitz has done more than blast the stone, bricks and mortar in England. "It has blasted prejudices and leveled distinctions," he said.

Put Country on War Basis, U. S. Medical Chief Urges

By Stephen J. McDonough
Associated Press Staff Writer

St. Louis, Nov. 11.—An outright plea for the Government to declare a state of wartime emergency was made today by Dr. Frank H. Lahey, president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Lahey, one of the Nation's outstanding surgeons and a member of President Roosevelt's committee on medical care, declared in an interview at the meeting of the Southern Medical Association "there must be a common incentive to bring the Army, Navy, labor, capital and every citizen into a concerted national defense drive."

Then, referring to the 8500 troops marching by his hotel in an Armistice Day parade, he remarked "Time is not enough" to stir people to a true realization of the task facing the United States.

Nelson Reported Objecting to Odlum Plan

Differences of opinion as to methods of keeping small businesses alive under pressure of the defense program are reported to have developed a disagreement among high banking-OPM officials.

At the center is Floyd B. Odlum, director of the OPM contract distribution division, which is charged with spreading defense contracts among small industries and helping manufacturers convert their plants from nonessential to defense production.

Emphasizing that OPM officials generally were convinced that aid to small businesses was of prime importance, a spokesman said the issue revolved entirely around the problem of how such aid could best be accomplished and be kept in line with demands of the defense program.

Odlum, it was understood, has proposed establishment of a pool of critical materials—possibly 2 per cent of the available supply. From this pool, he has suggested, needed supplies could be allocated to businesses employing less than 20 men.

Donald M. Nelson, OPM priorities director, has objected to this plan. It was learned, on grounds that arbitrary figures could not be used in determining the size of the business which could benefit from the pool. He has contended further that definite assurance of supplies would eliminate any incentive for small business to convert to defense production.

Nelson was represented as arguing that any distribution of critical materials to nondefense industries should be based on demonstrated need, employment problems, and other factors, with each industry given every possible incentive to manufacture defense equipment.

Crude Oil Price Boost to Be Rescinded
Price Administrator Leon Henderson said yesterday that price increases of 7 cents a barrel on North and North Central Texas crude oil, posted November 6, would be withdrawn at his request.

Henderson's announcement followed a meeting here with representatives of the Consolidated Oil Corporation and the Texas Co. An affiliate of Consolidated initiated the increase and was followed by Texaco and other companies.

"Prices cannot be advanced first and discussed afterward," Henderson declared. "We are studying the whole price situation in the mid-continent area and this study will be pressed forward rapidly."

"In the meantime, prices, which are generous, compared with those obtaining until recently, should remain stable."

The companies contended the advance was an adjustment, to bring prices into line with prices of comparable oil elsewhere, rather than an increase. Henderson rejected the contention, noting that the price for a substantial volume of production was 7 cents higher than before the increase and that "any difference in nomenclature is irrelevant."

Craig Foresees U. S. Control Of Prices in Retail Stores

By the Associated Press
Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The president of the American Retail Federation asserted today "The Government is moving in on the retail industry a little at a time but steadily," and predicted governmental regulation of retail prices in the near future.

"Up to date the defense program has been kind to the retail merchant," David R. Craig, Washington, D. C., told the New York State Council of Retail Merchants. "His business is better and his profits are up."

"In general," Craig said, "he has plenty of goods to sell. He has done a great deal to slow down the rate of retail prices."

"It is not likely to last much longer. The Government is moving in on the retail industry a little at a time, but steadily. Last month it began to regulate the sale of merchandise on installment credit and issued a famous order which said that priority would be given for maintenance, repairs and supplies to almost every kind of establishment except the retail establishment."

Pittsburgh Banks Cut Rates to 1½%
Pittsburgh, Nov. 11 (AP).—Interest rates in four of Pittsburgh's leading banks will be reduced one-half of 1 per cent on savings next month, cutting the return to 1½ per cent on accounts between $50 and $5000 and to 1½ per cent on balances greater than that.

The Mellon National Bank and the Union Trust Co. announced their new rates would be effective December 15. The First National Bank and Farmers Deposit National Bank set the date as December 31.

Oil Output Near All-Time Record

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—The United States produced an average of 4,096,100 barrels of crude oil daily in the week ended November 8, the American Petroleum Institute reported today, output topping the previous week's average by 24,900 barrels. A year earlier the daily average was 3,884,800 barrels.

The production figures for the week came close to the all-time record of 4,098,800 barrels daily in the week ended October 22.

Group Opposes Soldiers Using Field House

Opposition to use of the field-house of Banquette Playground as a recreation center for colored soldiers was voiced yesterday by the District Negro Baptist Conference, which voted to send delegates to President Roosevelt to complain about discrimination against members of their race in local defense recreation plans.

Resolutions were adopted asking that colored soldiers be permitted to use the center being prepared in the old Gunton Building at 801 Pennsylvania Avenue for white soldiers.

Similar protests have been made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Rock Creek Civic Association and United Government Employees.

According to plans of the recreation division of the District Defense Council the Banquette Center would be ready for occupancy on December 1, or as soon as it could be heated and furnished. The Gunton Building center would be ready at the same time and have the same amount of money expended on it. Each would provide cots for between 40 and 50 soldiers and have recreational facilities.

Jews Restricted In Bucharest

Berlin, Nov. 11 (AP)—A D. N. B. dispatch tonight from Bucharest said the Jewish population of the Rumanian capital must do their shopping and marketing in one hour, from 11 a. m. to 12 p. m., and then only after the Rumanian population has satisfied its needs.

Storekeepers serving Jews outside the stipulated hours will be sent to concentration camps, the news agency said.

TO THE OFFICIAL OPENING AND RECEPTION OF THE NEW

AND A WEEK OF

Special Events at The Hecht Co.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th will be ... "FOUNDERS' DAY"

...dedicated to the Founders of The Hecht Co. ... a day arranged for public shopping ... with rare and unusual savings in all 102 departments of The Hecht Co. The store will remain open Thursday from 9:30 a. m. till 9 p. m.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14th will be ... "LADIES HOME JOURNAL DAY"

...dedicated to this great American publication ... and presenting the distinguished editors and fashion authorities from the Ladies Home Journal, who will be here in person, to meet and consult with our patrons.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th will be ... "PARENTS' MAGAZINE DAY"

...dedicated to the youth of America ... as exemplified in this outstanding publication. Mothers and Fathers are invited to be present and to consult in person with the famed editors and writers of Parents Magazine.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th will be ... "ESQUIRE DAY"

...set apart for the male of the species ... a rare and unusual opportunity for the Gentlemen to meet their favorite editors, writers and authorities on Masculine Fashions. Make a note now, Mr. Businessman, to be on hand on Monday for "Esquire Day."

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th will be ... "GOOD HOUSEKEEPING DAY"

...dedicated to the splendid contributions of this famous magazine to American homes ... and the growing interest in family life as a democratic institution in America. Guest of honor will be Miss Dorothy Draper, and we cordially invite you to be present Tuesday, to consult with her.

AND THROUGHOUT THE WEEK ... AT EVERY TURN ... RARE HISTORICAL EXHIBITS!

Every day from 9:30 to 5:45 you'll find an array of fascinating exhibits on every floor in the store. See the actual gloves worn by Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, Henry VIII and Charles II ... the gorgeous perfume containers and other boudoir accessories of the 17th and 18th century ... the stunning costumes from the Pageant of Perfumes ... the rare writing desk equipment from the 17th and 18th centuries ... the exhibit of men's hats of the last 50 years ... the evolution of the nurse's uniform. And we could go on and on. Bring the children ... come yourself. Rarely has so wide and varied a collection been assembled under one roof ... at one time!
